Wire Tapping Admitted By Shimon, Report Says

Lieutenant Denies $20,000 Payment In Papers Given Senate by Barrett

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A special Senate committee yesterday received the Police Department report on alleged wire-tapping activities of Lieut. Joseph Shimon, Washington Metropolitan police officer.

Committee Chairman Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) told a press conference the report contained an admission by Shimon that he had engaged in wire-tapping over a period of years.

Pepper said the report also contained Shimon's denial that he had received a $20,000 payment for services in an investigation in which wire-tapping was involved. Pepper said the report referred to a $5000 payment, and to a $1000 bill. He declined to give details.

Press Conference Follows Hearing

Pepper's press conference followed immediately a 2-hour committee hearing behind locked doors in which the 5-member Senate investigating group received the wire-tapping report from Maj. Robert J. Barrett chief of Metropolitan Police.

With Barrett in the executive session were Inspector Robert S. Bryant, chief of detectives, and Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives.

Lieutenant Shimon, on leave from the Police Department, was not present for the Capitol Hill meeting. He is scheduled today to make his second appearance this week before the Federal grand jury investigating wire-tapping.

Pepper said his committee will resume its session at 3 p. m. today, and that the three police officers present yesterday may be called back to today's hearing.

Report Itself Kept Secret

Pepper's committee kept the wire-tapping report and other related documents delivered to it by Chief Barrett.

Pepper said the report was being placed in the custody of Committee Counsel Gerhard P. van Arkel. An official stenographer was on hand to record the closed-door session.

Pepper refused to make public any portion of the report although much of its contents has been covered by published accounts.

In his press conference, Pepper was asked whether the report disclosed any reference to a payment

4 Children Killed, 36 Hurt as Truck Upsets With 41

Mattawamkeag, Me., Aug. 9 (AP).—A truck carrying 41 children home from a picnic went off the Millinocket road and overturned tonight. Four children were killed and 36 injured.

State police identified the victims as:

Norma Malone, 13, Leonard Gallant, 8, and Eva Page, age undetermined, of East Millinocket, and Judy Osgood, of Bangor.

One child escaped injury, State police said.

State police said Eva's father drove the one and one-half ton stake truck. They said the vehicle swerved off the road, climbed an embankment and tipped over.

Usual Line-ups Are Reversed In Wage-Price Control Fight

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter
(First in a Series)

For almost a month, America has been watching a temperance society trying to make a man take another drink.

Congress, hitherto almost hysterically afraid of giving the President power over the economy, has been attempting to make the President take and use those powers—even though Mr. Truman doesn't want them.

In this ironic situation, Congress has been responding to real and powerful pressure from the public to impose controls over prices, wages and the distribution of goods. These are exactly the controls all Americans except die-hard Socialists ordinarily fight against with all their might.

The question is: Are these controls useful and necessary because of the expanded defense program?

Should they be put into operation at once, so we will not repeat the "too little and too late" kind of mistakes we suffered in 1940 and 1941?

Controversy Will Continue

From many indications, it would seem that most of the country would answer, "By all means, yes."

On the other hand, President Truman and the majority of his economic advisers in the Administration heartily oppose the idea of setting out now to fix price and wage ceilings.

Whatever the nature of the economic control laws Congress will enact this week or next, the controversy will be sure to continue. It is the purpose of this series of articles to look into some of the basic facts on which a judgment can be made.

For the most part, it would seem, the public is looking back to the situation at the outbreak of the last war and seeing in it a close parallel to the present.

People recall how military demands for many raw materials and the use of many factories and much labor made certain items scarce or not obtainable. They remember that prices went up, fast, until a general maximum price order, setting ceilings on pretty much everything there was to buy, went into effect in March, 1942.

"Hysterical . . . Imitative"

So the public and Congress now are asking, "Why should we wait until some date many months hence to do what had to be done before? Why not put ceilings in effect now?"

One business leader, with a sharp tongue and sharp wits to go with it, summarized this public mood as being "hysterical, masochistic and imitative."

Those who agree with him in opposing price and wage fixing now argue that the American people's reaction is like that of the cat who sat on a hot stove and now won't go near a cold one.

They contend that the situation today does not parallel that of World War II. We are not, in short, at war. We are not proposing to spend anything like the amounts of money, or to produce anything like the amount of goods, or to conscript anything like the number of men that we would in a world-wide, shooting conflict.

What led to inflation and scarcity in the last war was, oversimply stated, a situation of full employment in which people, highly paid as never before, accumulated great ability to buy what they wanted. At the same time, a great proportion of what they produced was not for sale. It was diverted from domestic civilian use to military purposes and foreign consumption.

In World War II, national defense and military spending ran, at its peak, to about 74 billion dollars a year, or 35 per cent of the gross national product (the total in goods and services the Nation produces).

At present, the total of such outlays—the current program, the additional 17 billion dollars the President has requested for defense spending, plus, let us say, 10 billion dollars a year more to allow for the program to expand much further in the next two or three years—cannot come to more than 15 percent of the gross national product.

Actually, the percentage probably will be much less.

Considering the situation for the next 12 months, it appears we will not increase military spending by anything like 17 billion dollars. Seven billion, Government experts say, is a more likely figure, and 10 billion appears to be the top outside limit of increase.

Add the increase to what is currently being spent or planned for this year for military purposes, make no allowance for an increase of our present production, and you still can't figure how more than 8 percent of what we turn out can be diverted from civilian to military use in the next year. This is only 4 percent more than at present.

To repeat, the higher figure, of a 15-percent diversion—compared with a 35-percent withdrawal in the last war—is based on assumptions that take into account not merely the present proposed increases in the defense program, but also the possibility of still further high boosts in 1951, 1952 and 1953.

Important Assumption Made

This suggests, then, that the diversion of goods we produce from civilian to military consumption is proportionately nowhere near as large as that which created such inflationary pressures during World War II. Other factors making for inflation and scarcity will be discussed in other articles.

One warning note should be added, even if it is obvious: the figures given above are taken on the assumption that we will not be engaged in an all-out world war. If that should happen, all bets are off, of course. There would then be no argument about the need for full controls—price, wage, rationing, manpower and what have you.

But if you are betting, or planning, on a full-scale war you would be taking many preparatory steps more significant and consequential than mere price fixing.

Gen. Young Cites Civil Defense Need

'Much More' Money, Supply Stockpiling Required, Official Declares in Memo

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

Some hints as to the ultimate size, shape and functions of the District's new-born civil defense organization were given yesterday by District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young.

Young prepared a memorandum for the as-yet-undesignated District civil defense director, bringing him up to date on what has been done and explaining in general terms the bigger job that lies ahead. Some of his points:

1. Money. Much more money will be needed than the $290,000 requested in a bill now before Congress. Supplies and equipment must be stockpiled. Auxiliary policemen, firemen, etc., must be trained and equipped. And if—"as is probable"—a large number of air raid sirens must be installed, money sought in the present bill for warning purposes will be "only a drop in the bucket."

2. Preparations. A decision must be made on whether and how many air raid shelters should be built. Supplies must be stockpiled at the edge of the city or in the suburbs for use in case of attack. Reserve forces must be trained to aid in rescue work, policing and firefighting and protection of water and transportation systems. Procedures must be drawn up for obtaining equipment from private sources when needed—such as lining up construction companies that could furnish equipment to clear wreckage.

3. Coordination. District civil defense plans must be coordinated with those of both the Federal Government and nearby areas. Whether there should be a single civil defense head for the Washington area must be worked out. District Commissioners should meet soon with Government heads in surrounding areas to "agree on basic principles."

4. Organization. The director and his staff will be located initially at the Upshur Street Hospital. It is hoped to secure another permanent headquarters later.

Civil defense preparations to date consist largely of reports by individual groups—such as physicians, police, highway officials—as to what their problems and needs would be in the event of attack. These reports were subjected to a week-long critique by Federal experts.

Police officials have indicated they will recruit a force of 4000 auxiliary policemen. Present plans call for creating a force of 6250 standby firemen. But no definite

Draft Boards Given Guide On Students

Officials Told 3 Conditions for Deferments Are Not Mandatory

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Local draft boards were advised yesterday to consider for deferment college students who fulfill the following conditions:

1. Have completed at least one academic year of a full-time course.
2. Rank in the upper half of their class scholastically.
3. Have shown intentions, prior to August 1, of enrolling in a full-time college course this fall.

Full-time graduate students will be considered as having met the first two conditions if they finished in the upper half of their class their last undergraduate year.

The policy laid down by National Selective Service headquarters was designed to clarify the situation for students planning to go on with their education this fall. Other policies may be adopted later.

The bulletin is only advisory and is not mandatory on local draft boards. The "operational bulletin" from National headquarters said the boards "may consider" for deferment the student who fulfills the conditions.

Existing regulations provide that a student now attending school may be deferred until the end of the school year.

The text of the bulletin to local boards:

"Pending the development and adoption of such other policies as might be necessary with respect to college students, local boards may consider the following conditions when all three exist in the case of any registrant as warranting consideration for occupational deferment:

"(1) The registrant has completed at least one academic year of a full-time course of instruction at a college, university or similar institution of learning.

"(2) The college or university at which the registrant last completed an academic year of a full-time course of instruction certifies that the registrant's scholastic standing placed him among the upper half of his class.

"(3) The local board is satisfied by the record of the registrant's actions in making normally required arrangements that he had fully intended prior to August 1, 1950, to enroll in a full-time course of instruction at a college, university or similar institution of learning for the academic year ending in the spring of 1951.

"In the case of a registrant meeting the above conditions to whom an order to report for induction has been issued, the local board is hereby authorized by the director under that power granted him in Section 1625.2 of the regulations to reopen the case for reconsideration."

Marine Fighters Fly Beneath Mortar Fire to Smash Tanks

By Murray Moler

Tokyo, Thursday, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Marine Corps pilots flying so low that their planes zoomed under a blanket of enemy mortar fire blazed a trail today for their fellow Leathernecks fighting toward Chinju on the ground. The carrier-based planes flew into valleys on the southernmost end of the fighting front, attacking Communists below, a release issued by Gen. Douglas MacArthur said. The planes were brought under enemy infantry fire from hilltops above them.

Using fire bombs to destroy Communist machine-gun and artillery emplacements in the Chinju sector, Marine Corsairs repeatedly flew under the arc of enemy mortar fire.

Two 50-ton tanks were wiped out by elements of the famous "Black Sheep" Squadron organized on Guadalcanal seven years ago by Col. Gregory (Pappy) Boyington.

Armament Revealed

Vice Admiral Charles T. Joy, commander of naval forces in the Far East, detailed for the first time the armament carried by Task Force 77 planes flying in Korean waters.

The carrier-based F-4U Corsair carries three 1600-pound bombs and eight 5-inch rockets. It also has four 20-mm. gun mounts in the wings.

The Skyraider attack bomber carries three bombs of 200 pounds each and 12 5-inch rockets. It also has two 20-mm. wing guns.

The F-9 Grumman Panther jet carries two bombs of 1000 pounds each, six five-inch rockets and four 20-mm. guns.

Today's air war activity followed dawn-to-dusk missions yesterday. American and Australian fliers raked enemy front-line troops with an uninterrupted stream of bomb, rocket and cannon fire, attacking only a few hundred feet ahead of advancing Allied troops.

B-26 light bombers, F-80 jets, American and Australian F-81 Mustangs and carrier-based Marine Corsairs threw their full weight into the savage front-line

Korea Gains Raise Hopes At Pentagon

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Indications that the tide of battle in Korea may have turned were plentiful here yesterday, with Army officers speaking hopefully of a breakout in Patton fashion from the Pusan perimeter.

This new optimism was based in part on reports from the Korean front which told of steady progress in the drive on Chinju and of counterattacks which have all but wiped out the Naktong River bridgehead. In the latter case, concerted attacks by the U. S. First Cavalry Division on the south and the South Korean First Division on the north had driven the Reds back across the river at the northern crossing site.

Patton Thrust Recalled

At the southern end of the perimeter, the United States Thirty-fifth Regimental Combat Team was reported to have pushed its patrols within seven airline miles of Chinju. Beleaguered U. N. troops were proudly described in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's afternoon communique as "aggressive minded."

While nobody here was ready to assert that the buildup of troops and supplies within the Pusan perimeter had reached the point where a calculated counter offensive might be launched, there was talk of lightning opportunity and what might be made of it. An

Only North Korean Successes Reported In Northeast Sector; Taegu Threat Eased

BULLETIN

Tokyo (Thursday), Aug. 10 (AP).—American patrols have reached the banks of the Nam River, less than 5 miles from Chinju, and the enemy retreat is now "in nature of a rout," General MacArthur's headquarters said today.

Army intelligence reported that the enemy was abandoning equipment and falling back so fast they were unable to go into prepared positions.

The enemy is unable to disengage from pursuing American forces, a briefing officer added.

The elite Sixth North Korean Division has had "heavy losses," he declared, and is "in a serious situation."

Tokyo (Thursday), Aug. 10 (AP).—Two onrushing Army infantry spearheads of the American southern offensive reportedly linked up today six to seven miles east of Chinju. The Korean Communists appeared ready to flee this southern anchor of their line.

Reports to United States Army Headquarters said doughboys of the Fifth Regimental Combat Team and the Twenty-fifth Infantry Division's Thirty-fifth Regiment joined on high ground that leads to within 2 miles of the burned-out city. The Reds had hoped to drive from there eastward 55 air miles to Pusan, the all-important United Nations supply port.

To the north, the Army's First Cavalry and Twenty-fourth Divisions also were attacking, smashing bridgeheads the Reds had put across the Naktong River before the key communications hub of Taegu.

Near Changnyong, 23 air miles southwest of Taegu, the Reds were retreating back across the river and "pulling back their front line," an Eighth Army communique said. The Thursday noon communique said the Reds had been chased Wednesday from the last high ground they held east of the river.

The First Cavalry launched an

MacArthur Says Defeatists Started Rumors About Trip

Tokyo (Thursday), Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur charged today that his recent trip to visit Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek on Formosa has been maliciously misrepresented to the public by defeatists and appeasers aiming to create disunity and destroy American confidence.

MacArthur, in a bitterly worded statement, said his trip "was limited entirely to military matters." He added that it had "no connection with political affairs."

"The subject of the future of the Chinese government, of developments on the Chinese mainland or anything else outside the scope of my own military responsibility was not discussed or even mentioned," he said.

MacArthur said his visit has been "maliciously misrepresented to the public by those who invariably in the past have propagandized a policy of defeatism and appeasement in the Pacific."

Formal Approval Due Today

House Is Virtually Unanimous In Backing Standby Controls

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The House yesterday gave a virtually unanimous indorsement to standby wage-price control powers for the President.

The voice vote was not final, but all signs last night indicated the lower chamber today will formally approve this section along with other parts of what is known as the "Defense Production Act of 1950." The House meets at 10 a. m. to conclude debate on the measure.

A number of amendments were written into the wage-price and other parts of the bill yesterday, subject to final action today.

One, by Representative Poage (D., Tex.), would require the President, if he decides to establish price ceilings, to "at the same time" invoke wage ceilings. This amendment carried by a teller vote of 146 to 71.

But the language of the bill is still so broad and gives the President so much discretionary power, that it was far from clear whether the amendment would really tie prices and wages that closely together. A number of exceptions still remain, some of them contrary to the amendment's intent, at least.

A second amendment, by Representative Kunkel (R., Pa.), carried by 118 to 96, struck out the clauses giving the President power, at his discretion, to invoke selective

2 Killed, 4 Hurt In Flash Fire On U. S. Cruiser

Pearl Harbor, Aug. 9 (AP).—The Navy said today two enlisted men were killed and four injured in a flash fire aboard the cruiser Manchester last Thursday.

An announcement said the fire occurred in the aft fire-room while the light cruiser was 500 miles off Hawaii. It was en route from the West coast to Pearl Harbor.

The Navy listed the dead as:

Roger E. Pelland, boilerman first class, son of Mrs. Alcide Pelland, Willimansett, Mass., and Albert P. Corbett, fireman, brother of Florence Neild, Roxborough, Pa.

A Navy spokesman said four other crew members were in Tripler general hospital here with minor to moderate injuries.

Shakeup Follows Criticism

Truman Drops RFC Chief Hise, Appoints Three New Directors

(Senate Rejects Hutchinson, Switzer, two others. Page 6)

By the United Press

President Truman shook up the high command of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation yesterday, dropping Chairman Harley Hise and appointing three new members to the agency's board of directors.

The RFC has been under heavy fire in Congress for its lending policies, especially toward the Lustron Corp., prefab home manufacturing firm, and Texmass Corp., a Texas oil company. A Senate subcommittee is investigating the agency's lending policies.

The shakeup was disclosed in a list of nominations which Mr. Truman sent to the Senate for confirmation.

The President failed to nominate Hise and board member Harvey Gunderson, a Republican, for another term. Both had been under fire from members of the Senate subcommittee.

The three new members appointed were C. Edward Rowe, a Democrat, and a Boston attorney; Walter E. Cosgriff, a Salt Lake City Republican and president of the Continental National Bank and Trust Co., and W. Elmer Harber, Democrat, president of the First National Bank, Seminole, Okla., and the American National Bank, Shawnee, Okla.

Henry A. Mulligan, another commission member, resigned about two months ago.

Republican Walter Lee Dunham and Democrat William E. Willett were nominated for reappointment.

The terms of all RFC members expired June 30 and, under a new law, the new terms will be staggered. Dunham and Rowe were nominated for one year, Cosgriff and Harber for two years, and Willett for three years.

After those terms are served, all reappointments or new nominations will be for three years.

Mr. Truman will name a new RFC chairman after his nominations have been confirmed.

A Senate Banking Subcommittee, headed by Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) has conducted an inquiry into the RFC and its lending policies. It recently issued a report condemning the agency's handling of $37,500,000 in loans to Lustron, which later went bankrupt.

Mr. Truman asked Congress to approve a Government reorganization plan, which would put the RFC in the Commerce Department. Fulbright opposed the move until his subcommittee completed its investigation, and the Senate rejected the plan.

Senate critics of Mr. Truman's proposal also note that the Hoover Commission on Government reorganization recommended the agency be placed in the Treasury Department.

Ouster Move Ruled Out

Malik Reported Ready to Meet U. N. Groups in Stalemate Talk

Lake Success, Aug. 9 (AP).—Russia's Jacob A. Malik agreed tentatively today to meet other members of the U.N. Security Council in a secret session here Thursday to discuss the Council's stalemate on the Korean issue.

This was disclosed tonight after a two-hour meeting of non-Communist members of the security council in the British delegation office.

A British spokesman said Malik had agreed "in principle" to attend the meeting behind closed doors Thursday but he would not say that Malik definitely would be there.

The session Thursday will be held in advance of an open meeting scheduled for 2 p. m. The British spokesman would not say what time the closed meeting will be held.

Before the secret meeting this afternnon it was disclosed that the United States and Britain had decided against any move to eject Malik from the presidency of the Security Council at this time.

A British spokesman said that his delegation does not believe it is legally possible to make such a move now. Other sources said the Americans did not believe it was necessary to take such strong measures.

Ernest A. Gross, No. 2 U. S. delegate on the Security Council, attended the closed session today with John C. Ross, another delegate, and James N. Hyde, an ad-

Legislators at Odds On Security Steps

Interim Measure

Taft Backs Tax Hike of 5 Billion

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congress moved quickly yesterday to tighten the Nation's internal security, but fell out over just how to do it.

Three bills dealing with specific security problems passed the Senate unanimously, but legislators divided into two camps on the President's broader-antisabotage bills.

Moves developed in both Houses to revive the more drastic Mundt-Nixon bill, chiefly backed by Republicans.

Senate Democratic leaders meanwhile decided to draft their own internal security bill, with more in it than Mr. Truman asked.

The leadership maneuver was obviously designed to bypass the Senate Judiciary Committee, which sponsored the Mundt-Nixon bill, and get at least the core of the President's recommendations to the Senate floor.

One leadership spokesman said a revamped antisubversive bill, embodying all of the President's recommendations and possibly some of the less controversial Mundt-Nixon provisions, will be offered as an amendment for a minor security bill now pending on the Senate calendar.

Maneuvering in House

A similar footrace for position developed in the House, as the President's call for tighter anti-sabotage laws started up furious activity all along the long-dormant front.

The Senate passed a series of isolated security measures (1) making espionage for a foreign power punishable by death or up to 30 years in time of peace, (2) empowering heads of Federal agencies to summarily fire employes they consider poor security risks, and (3) setting up new immigration barriers against Communists.

The President signed into law legislation empowering the Government to search foreign vessels and to take other measures to safeguard United States ports against entry of subversives or an atomic bomb "sneak."

In these other developments:

The House Un-American Activities Committee, meeting in executive session, decided to include some of the key provisions of the Mundt-Nixon Red-control measure in a new bill it will send to the House.

Chairman Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) of the House Judiciary Committee said he plans to put the President's milder security recommendations in bill form and launch public hearings next week.

The Senate Republican Policy Committee, meeting with Senator Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.), reaffirmed its indorsement of the Mundt-Nixon bill and discussed party strategy for getting it to a separate Senate vote ahead of the Administration bill.

Legislation granting the Commerce Department authority to control civil aircraft flights in the interest of national security was approved by the Senate Commerce Committee.

Seamen to Be Screened

The Coast Guard in the meantime disclosed that all seamen embarking on American vessels for East and Gulf ports will be screened for loyalty, as has been recent practice at West Coast ports.

The flurry of legislative activity on security measures simmered down very much to whether the Democrats or the Republicans will get the credit for the broader security moves yet to be taken.

The Senate leadership decision to write its own general security bill was reached at a closed morning session of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee.

The step was prompted by the fact that the Senate Judiciary Committee has already reported the Mundt-Nixon bill, and seemed unlikely to write a new one more along Administration lines.

The Democratic policy-makers nonetheless agreed to contact Senate Judiciary Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) on any steps that are taken.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) told reporters: "We are going to get together a bill taking all of the President's suggestions, and some made up here."

McCarran for Mundt Bill

McCarran made it plain to reporters that he is supporting the Mundt-Nixon bill. He said his committee already has acted and he considers the bill constitutional.

Asked what he would do if the Administration measure is referred to his group, he said he would "refer it to a competent subcommittee, for long study."

Mr. Truman asked Congress to pass laws extending the statute of limitations to make it easier to punish spies. He also recommended a spy registration law, more authority to prevent sabotage and a closer check on aliens who should be deported.

There is some pressure in the Democratic policy group to add some of the Mundt-Nixon provisions to this, including the requirement that Communist and Communist-front organizations must register, along with totalitarian "conspirators". Another Mundt-Nixon provision requires Communist propaganda to be labeled as such.

The President in his message, however, warned against legislation "so broad and vague in its terms as to endanger the freedoms of speech, press and assembly."

Announcing the Senate GOP Policy Committee's reindorsement of the Mundt-Nixon bill, Chairman Robert A. Taft (Ohio) dismissed the President's proposals as "inadequate to meet the Communist problems."

The drastic immigration bill, meanwhile, zipped through the Senate. It would make it possible to prevent any alien suspected of being a subversive from entering the United States. Top-rank diplomats would be exempt, but diplomats of lesser rank could be ejected if engaged in espionage or subversive propaganda.

France Bars British Plan For Pooling

Paris, Aug. 9 (NYHT).—The alternative to the Schuman plan set forth yesterday by the British Conservative Party is totally unacceptable to France, a spokesman for the Foreign Ministry said today.

The counterproposal was tentatively presented to the Council of Europe in Strasbourg by Harold MacMillan, Conservative member of the British Parliament. It would place the Schuman plan's high authority under the direct control of the Strasbourg Council of Ministers, with each country having veto power where its own interests are involved.

The spokesman made it clear today that France is not even prepared to discuss the matter since, in the French view, it has already been discussed by the British and French three months ago. That discussion ended in an agreement to disagree.

The two proposals, he said, were diametrically opposed. The heart of the Schuman plan is the erection of a high authority for the control of coal and steel which would be supranational; that is, not directly answerable to the individual countries involved. The British plan, he said, by eliminating that feature eliminates the whole plan, as envisaged by the French.

White House Takes Up Rail Strike Issue

NYHT News Service

The White House disclosed yesterday that it has intervened in the long smouldering dispute between the nation's major railroads and conductors and trainmen in an apparent attempt to avoid a railroad tie-up which could ham-string defense activities.

It was announced that John R. Steelman, Presidential assistant and labor trouble expert at the White House, met Tuesday and again yesterday with both sides to the dispute over wages and hours. Mr. Steelman was reported to be making a general canvass of the dispute preliminary to calling representatives of the unions and carriers into negotiating sessions.

Meanwhile the presidents of the two rail unions—R. O. Hughes, of the Order of Railway Conductors, and W. P. Kennedy, of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen—sent President Truman a telegram asking the government to seize the lines to avoid a national rail transit strike.

The telegram, read to the Senate by Senator Wayne Morse, Republican of Oregon, said: "We respectfully recommend to you that our Government take possession of an operate the railroads in the United States until such time as this dispute is settled in fairness to the rights of our members."

The two union heads also advised President Truman that they would not accept recommendations last June 15 of a special emergency board to settle the nearly two-year-old dispute. The board suggested a 5-day, 40-hour week and an 18-cents-an-hour increase for the 75,000 railroad yard workers, but disapproved any wage increases or improvements in hours for the 125,000 trainmen and conductors.

U. S. Lines Bar Aliens As Crewmen

Newport News, Va., Aug. 9 (AP).—Seven allien seamen who have been furnished by the local National Maritime Union office to crew two recently recalled James River reserve fleet vessels were refused admittance on the ships this morning.

Officials of the United States Lines, which will operate the Victory ships for the Military Sea Transportation Service, said orders were received yesterday from their New York headquarters forbidding any but American citizens as crewmen on all MSTS vessels.

The prohibition does not apply to other ships operated by the line. Local United States Lines officials said they did not know whether the new policy was set by the company or by the Government.

The seven aliens—who all have their "first papers" (declaration of intent to become an American citizen)—were part of a partial crew of about 30 sent by NWU to work aboard the SS Asbury Victory and Cooper Union Victory. Both vessels are undergoing general overhaul at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co.

The ships' crews are expected to be fully and officially signed on by the deputy of the United States Shipping Commissioners from Norfolk Friday.

Strike Stalls 'Coming Out' Of Warships

Baltimore, Aug. 9 (AP).—1100 production and maintenance workers at Maryland Drydock Company went on strike today when their negotiators failed to reach an agreement on a new contract.

William Purnell Hall, vice president of the company, said the walkout held up work on four government ships taken out of mothballs for use on the Korean emergency.

One was scheduled to leave the yard Friday after repairs and overhaul. A second was due out Saturday.

The company's contract with Local 31 of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine and Shipyard Workers ran out June 23. Twice since then it has been extended for 30-day periods at the request of the Federal Conciliation Service and the Secretary of Labor.

Readers Digest Sued For 5 Million by Tucker

Chicago, Aug. 9 (AP).—Preston Tucker, rear-engine automobile promoter, filed a five-milliin-dollar libel suit today against the Reader's Digest. He claimed the magazine published a "malicious and vicious" article about him in its September, 1949, issue.

The article was a condensation of one published in the June 25, 1949, issue of Collier's magazine. Tucker also has sued Collier's for five million dollars damages.

Gen. Clay Sets Up A-Bomb Defense for N. Y.

New York, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay issued today a civil defense blueprint "based upon the assumption that an enemy will use the atom bomb" on New York State.

Total casualties, he wrote, may be expected to run into tens of thousands.

"The devastation produced by an atom bomb explosion will be greatest if the bomb is detonated in the air above the target," wrote the former U. S. military commander in Berlin. He is now chairman of the New York State Civil Defense Commission.

In dry military language, Clay instructed his local civil defense directors just what to expect—how "an atomic air burst appears as a ball of fire which gives off enormous heat and emits, at the moment of explosion, great quantities of lethal radioactive rays, moving at the speed of light."

He called for stockpiling of medical supplies; preparation for mass feeding, sheltering and evacuation, and he spelled out what must be done to mobilize doctors and nurses, policemen, firemen, emergency crews to dig the injured from rubble, and to repair and restore ruined public utilities.

In his 'estimate of enemy action," Clay assumed atomic bombs, "because of their high cost and limited supply, will be aimed at large military or industrial targets and areas with concentrated population." In the "unlikely event" that enemy bombers miss their target, adjacent areas may sustain hits, he said.

To emphasize the atom bomb's force of "20,000 tons of TNT," Clay said, "This generation is familiar with the 'blockbuster,' the largest bomb of World War II, which was charged with the equivalent of approximately 5 tons of TNT.

"So, here is a bomb with 4000 times the explosive energy of the largest earlier bomb."

Clay based most of his calculations on the assumption that the bomb will be exploded in the air.

"The radioactive rays will cause the death of nearly everyone fully exposed to them up to a distance of one-half mile from the spot above which the bomb explodes, and it is estimated that 50 per-cent of the people in the open three-quarters of a mile away will fail to survive," he said.

Churchill Proposed As Europe War Chief

Churchill Flies To Europe Session

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

WINSTON CHURCHILL, British Conservative Party leader, boards a plane at Kent, England, bound for Strasbourg, France, where he will attend sessions of the Council of Europe. He will address the group today and predictions have been made that he will propose that the Germans be armed to help in western Europe's defense. Churchill's followers said he would make a speech of world importance

Strasbourg, Aug. 9 (NYHT).—Paul Reynaud, the last Prime Minister of the Third French Republic, today proposed to the European Consultative Assembly that a European war ministry be established and that Winston Churchill, Great Britain's wartime leader, become the first European war minister.

As the Assembly continued to debate almost exclusively the problem of defense in face of the threat of Soviet aggression, Reynaud said:

"It is too late to turn around and flounder in the sands of committees. It is necessary to confide to a responsible man the care of organizing European defense. We must finally find a European war minister."

Turning toward Churchill, a few seats away, Reynaud continued:

"In order to find that man . . . it is not necessary to leave this hall." Churchill smiled. He may comment on the proposal Thursday when he is scheduled to make his first speech of the session.

Although discussion of defense is prohibited by the statute on the Assembly, speakers took advantage of a suggestion of the Committee of Ministers that they express their "complete solidarity with the action of the Security Council of the United Nations for the defense of peace-loving people against aggression."

Before Reynaud spoke, former French Prime Minister Georges Bidault suggested that the European governments designate a high commissioner who would be responsible for putting into effect agreed measures for the joint defense.

The opportunity to debate measures that should be taken for the common security seems to have put new life into the Assembly.

Speakers complained bitterly of the Committee of Ministers' refusal to grant more power to the Assembly and a failure to take positive action on Assembly recommendations. At the same time they rejoiced in having overcome the statutory ban on discussion of defense.

3 Drydocks There

Soviets Mass Shipping at Vladivostok

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—Russia is reported assembling drydocks, merchant vessels and supplies at Vladivostok, right on Korea's doorstep.

A study released today by American ship owners reports a large number of Soviet vessels of all types have been sailing out of Baltic and Black Sea ports to the Soviet's chief Siberian seaport, less than 100 miles from Korea.

The American Merchant Marine Institute, a trade organization of ship owners whose vessels fly the American flag, drew the following picture after studying available records:

Russian tankers with full cargoes have sailed to the Far Eastern harbor of Vladivostok recently from the Black Sea oil ports of Constanza and Batum.

Within the past two months three drydocks have been towed from Latvia, on the Baltic, and from Odessa on the Black Sea, to Vladivostok.

Many of the merchantmen bound for the Far East were loaded with grain. Others carried general cargo. Even trawlers were reported in the movement to the Pacific.

Meanwhile, in the Soviet-controled shipyards of eastern Germany, repair work has been going at full tilt on Russian vessels. Seven Soviet vessels were at Antwerp recently awaiting repairs.

"What bearing all this may have on the Korean situation remains to be seen," the institute said. "This heavy movement by water could mean the Trans-Siberian Railroad is fully occupied with the transportation of military materials."

It attached "special significance" to the transfer of drydocks, all of which put in at Singapore for fuel and stores. The stop at Singapore is an example of the manner in which the movement of Soviet vessels may be traced.

Defense Official Denies Plans To Build Huge New Carrier

By the United Press

Congressional sources said yesterday plans are in the works for a giant new flush-deck aircraft carrier, but a high Defense official said the Navy does not intend to build such a ship at this time.

According to Congressional informants, who insisted that a formal announcement would be forthcomng "soon," the proposed vessel would be slghtly smaller but of the same general design as the 65,000-ton supercarrier, USS United States, which Defense Secretary Louis Johnson scuttled last year.

They indicated the reduction in size gave Johnson a "face-saving" reason to drop his former objections, and predicted flatly that the big carrier "will be built this time."

But a top-ranking naval officer asserted that the Navy itself has abandoned its cherished supercarrier at least for the present. He said the Navy first wants to beef up more of its medium-sized Essex class carriers so they can handle larger jet planes.

This official pointed out that it would take about four years to build a big flush-deck carrier. Navy policy-makers, he said, believe it is much more urgent in the light of the present international situation to build up the striking power of the fleet as rapidly as possible by channeling available funds into refitting of present carriers.

The USS United States was to have cost 189 million dollars. Its keel already had been laid at Newport News, Va., when Johnson issued his cancellation order, which promptly became a major issue in last year's "admiral's revolt" aganist unification policies.

Congressional quarters could not estimate how much the reputedly planned new carrier might cost. But they said the Navy has been doing preliminary work on the plans for "some time" and that legislation may be introduced soon to authorize it.

Representative E. J. Robeson, jr. (D., Va.), former vice president of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., said it is his "opinion" that the flush-deck carrier project will be revived, and that much of the original work on the United States can be salvaged.

Robeson has severed his connection with the shipbuilding firm and emphasized that he was not speaking from knowledge gained from the firm or from the Navy.

Belgian House Takes First Step in Ousting Leopold

Brussels, Aug. 9 (AP).—The Belgian Chamber of Deputies tonight approved the transfer of King Leopold's constitutional powers to his 19-year-old son, Prince Baudouin.

The count was 165 in favor of the transfer, 27 against and 7 abstentions.

The chamber's vote constituted the first stage in the transfer of the powers of Leopold III. Tomorrow the Senate will vote on the measure and on Friday it will be voted by a joint assembly of both houses of Parliament.

Baudouin, a quiet bespectacled youth, then is expected to take the oath as Prince Royal, or regent, on Friday afternoon.

Tonight's vote climaxed a session which twice was threatened with suspension when violent scenes brought deputies to their feet on both sides of the house.

Many of those voting for the bill said they did so unwillingly and only as a result of Leopold's appeal to all parties to rally around his son.

Rioting and disorders erupted in Belgium after Leopold returned to the throne from exile in Switzerland on July 22. The clashes became so bitter and widespread that Belgium for a time tottered on the brink of civil war.

At the peak of the disorders Leopold agreed to hand over his recently assumed regal powers to his son and implied that Baudouin would become King in fact when he reaches the age of 21 on September 7, 1951.

Danish Socialists Quit Office in Fight Over Taxes

Copenhagen, Aug. 9 (AP) — Premier Hans Hedtoft of Denmark offered the resignation of his Socialist cabinet to King Frederick today after the government collapsed over financial policy.

The King asked Hedtoft to stay in office until after new elections.

The three-year-old government collapsed when the Liberal and Conservative parties in the lower chamber refused to support the cabinet's tax and economic bills.

However the chamber, in an extraordinary session, approved government measures to appropriate 300 million kroner 43 million dollars) aydditional for the army, and navy and 50 million kroner ($7,200,000) for civil defense.

No Policy Change, Harriman Declares

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

W. Averell Harriman, back from the Far East, said yesterday that there had been "no change" in American policy on Formosa, and that none was contemplated.

The standing policy, he said, was laid down on June 27 when President Truman asked the Chinese Nationalists to cease operations against the Communist-held mainland and directed the Navy's Seventh Fleet to prevent any invasion of the island.

Harriman said that if the Chinese Communists did attempt an invasion of Formosa, the forces under General Douglas MacArthur would "stop" it.

He also told reporters General MacArthur was confident of victory against the Communist forces in Korea.

Harriman's statements in a news conference came after five days of rumor here and at Lake Success about his mission to Tokyo, and about the earlier flight of General MacArthur to Formosa to confer with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, leader of Nationalist China. It was suspected, for one thing, that the Administration wanted to make sure MacArthur had implied no secret commitments of American political support to Chiang.

Five-Day Round Trip

Harriman, who is Special Assistant to the President on Foreign Affairs, left Washington last Friday for Tokyo, his assignment being to confer with General MacArthur on the political situation in the Far East.

A report circulated in Washington the day Harriman left that the State Department was completely in the dark about General MacArthur's conference with Chiang Kai-shek. It was suggested this may have had something to do with the Harriman mission.

Harriman exploded this yesterday by saying:

"The visit of General MacArthur to Formosa had nothing to do with my visit to Tokyo."

Denies "Surprise"

Harriman also knocked down a report that high officials did not know in advance that MacArthur planned to visit Formosa. He said President Truman knew it, and also Secretary of State Acheson, Secretary of Defense Johnson and himself.

It "seemed entirely natural," he said, for MacArthur to visit Formosa and confer with Chiang Kai-shek in carrying out President Truman's instructions.

He said MacArthur and Chiang talked only about "military matters," and he told of seeing copies of messages MacArthur had sent to Washington on his Formosa visit.

Harriman, who got back from the Far East yesterday, talked to reporters in the State Department conference room, scene of President Truman's weekly news conference. He seemed reasonably fresh after his swift trip and the long hours in the air.

He told of his talks with MacArthur, a friend of 30 years, and described his visit to the Korean war front. Praising the South Korean troops for their courage and fighting ability, he said not a single unit had surrendered to the Communists. He said our own soldiers, generals and GI's alike, had great confidence in them.

Impressed by Teamwork

Harriman said he was impressed by the close teamwork of the air, sea and ground forces under MacArthur, and also by the high morale of those forces. He said all were waiting for the time to arrive when they could destroy the enemy.

The questions asked of Harriman reflected the rumors that have been flying around Washington and the feeling in certain quarters that his mission was to ascertain what really took place in the MacArthur-Chiang Kai-shek conference.

"Why did you go?" one reporter asked.

Harriman explained the directive he got from the President—to talk to MacArthur about the Far Eastern political situation.

Was defense of Formosa discussed?

Covered "Waterfront"

"We covered the waterfront," Harriman said, explaining that they had taken up all policies and situations in which MacArthur had an interest.

He was asked if MacArthur was satisfied with the Administration's Formosa policy.

"General MacArthur is a soldier," Harriman answered, "and he will carry out any orders that the President gives him."

Asked if he learned any more from MacArthur than the general had put in his messages to Washington, Harriman said his talks, naturally, had given him a more vivid picture.

Did he think the Chinese Communists would attempt an invasion of Formosa.

Harriman said he would not try to guess what the Communists would do; but he was confident that MacArthur's forces would "stop an invasion if it is attempted."

Daring Dash By Tired GIs Saves a Train

Tokyo, Aug. 9 (AP).—American combat engineers in Korea were ordered to destroy a stranded trainload of explosives "at all costs."

But they decided the ammunition and gasoline were too valuable to destroy. So——

They seized a railway station in "No Man's Land," hooked an engine to the stranded train, and brought it out. They blew up rail crossings, switches, bridges and communication lines as they retreated without mishap.

The story was told today in an official release.

For two days and two nights the fighting engineers had worked blowing up bridges at Kumchon. After burning the town and laying mine fields they had regrouped in their company area.

Then about midnight orders arrived by telephone to the battalion commander, Lieut. Col. William C. Holley of Corvallis, Oreg.

Fifteen freight cars heavy with ammunition, gasoline and high explosives were stranded just outside the First Calvary sector. Four miles north of the train North Korean guerillas had taken a town and might capture the valuable train and cargo.

The problem was to blow up the train before the guerillas arrived. Twenty tired riflemen loaded demolition for blasting into jeeps and set out.

Holley accompanied the advance group. The main body of engineers was to follow in trucks mounted with 50 caliber machineguns.

Holley told how his 20-man daredevil squad raced through Poksong and reached Kumi. There they seized the rail station and formed a perimeter around it.

Holley found a telephone and called Poksong for an engine to pull the train back to safe territory. The engineers marked time from 2 until 4 a. m. The engine chugged in before the guerillas.

2 Die, 3 Injured In Yellowstone Park Hotel Fire

Gardiner, Mont., Aug. 9 (AP).—Two persons were burned to death and three others were injured early today as flames destroyed the Park Hotel at the northern gateway of Yellowstone National Park.

The dead were Mrs. Hayes (first name unavailable) of New York and Al Durochie of Casper, Wyo.

The woman's husband was taken to a Federal Government hospital for treatment of burns. The others hurt were Paul Stradlin, owner of the hotel, and Betty Baer (address unavailable), who leaped from her second-floor room to the ground.

Quick work by Hans Fixdahl, a night clerk, probably saved others from death or injury. He raced through flaming corridors to arouse sleeping guests, and many were scantily dressed as they ran into the open. The cause of the fire was not immediately determined.

Va. Loses 6 Schools Through Consolidation

Richmond, Va. Aug. 9 (AP)—Six Virginia high schools were consolidated out of existence during the past school term, the State Department of Education reported today.

Draft Officials Expect to Fill Quota on Time

District draft officials expressed confidence yesterday that well over September's quota of 252 men will have qualified by the first of the month.

So far about 480 men, including 108 yesterday, have been examined at Arlington Farms and some 900 more are due to be examined this month — approximately 100 for each Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Of the first 180 men examined, 69 qualified—a rate of 38 percent.

October's quota is 248, making 500 for the District for the two months.

The 108 men reporting yesterday were from Boards 1, 3 and 14. A total of 126 were ordered, 18 failing to show.

Most of the missing registrants, Deputy District Selective Service Director Frank D. Norton said, have probably failed to notify their draft boards of a change of address.

Meantime, on the recruiting front the various services reported these takers yesterday:

Navy: 12 enlisted; 2 reserves recalled to active duty; 13 processed —7 of these accepted for enlistment, 6 rejected. In as a seaman recruit was James Joseph Gallery, 21, son of Rear Admiral Daniel V. Gallery of Vienna, Va., and the Atlantic Fleet.

Marines: 2 reenlisted; 5 accepted for enlistment out of 33 inquiries.

Army and Air Force: 12 enlisted, 8 Army, 4 Air Force; 37 examined, 30 of these approved for enlistment, 7 rejected.

U. S. Probing Mystery Flier Pickup at Sea

New York, Aug. 9 (AP)—Immigration authorities today said they were investigating "every aspect" of the case of a mysterious pilot who landed his rented seaplane 75 miles out in the Atlantic and was picked up by the Polish liner Batory.

There appeared to be considerable suspicion that the pilot planned the hazardous landing.

The Batory was the ship on which Communist leader Gerhard Eisler fled to Europe and was the first ship in New York harbor to be subjected to a "Trojan horse" search for hidden atomic weapons.

The master of the Batory, Capt. Jan Cwiklinski, first messaged that the pilot gave his name as Guillermo San Sebastian, 26, of Mexico City. But in a second message to immigration authorities Cwiklinski said his added passenger had identified himself as William Jesse Newton, an American citizen.

Edward J. Shaughnessy, district director of the Immigration Service, said, "We're working on every aspect of the case with other Government agencies."

The Batory's skipper said the flier told him he had rented the plane from Lambros Seaplane Base, Hackensack, N. J., and had been forced down at sea.

George Lambros, operator of the seaplane base, said a "Mr. Newton" rented the plane yesterday for a "short pleasure flight for about 15 minutes" and had "disappeared over the horizon." He said the pilot had asked for a life preserver.

Yanks' Uphill Battle Pins Reds on River

By Hal Boyle

Naktong River Front, Aug. 9 (AP).—United States troops went up into the hills today chasing after a battalion of North Korean Reds who had slipped across the Naktong River to the allied east side. By nightfall the doughboys had driven the Reds back to the water's edge.

The Reds waded through the river shallows last night 2 miles below Waegwan and penetrated 3 miles. They were then isolated on a ridge some 9 miles from the vital city of Taegu by a battalion of the First United States Cavalry Division. It had been held in reserve for just such a counter-attack.

For about four hours the invaders' fire blocked the road from Waegwan to Taegu. They had good observation posts atop a 1200-foot ridge and they could reach the highway with machine-gun, mortar and howitzer fire.

But the point-blank fire of 10 American light tanks and a continuous shelling by tank artillery and infantry mortars forced the enemy to fall back as doughboys worked methodically up the ridge toward them. By 1:30 p. m. (11:30 p. m., EDT., Tuesday) the road was open and the Americans were pushing the Reds steadily back toward the Naktong River.

The battle was a day-long uphill struggle fought on one of the hottest days of the year.

Praising the fighting spirit of his men, Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, First Cavalry Division commander, said he would welcome more such enemy attacks.

"We were ready for them," he said. "There probably will be more trying to come across the river—and I hope they do. I don't want to discourage them from fighting the First Cavalry Division."

Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, Eighth Army commander, drove over a mortar-swept road to see for himself how the battle was going. A jeep knocked out by a mortar shell flamed some 50 yards down the road.

Gay praised Lieut. Harry C. Buckley, young West Point graduate whose observation helped pinpoint the location of the enemy battalion and speed artillery fire on it.

"He is a smart lad who just returned to action after being wounded," said the general. "And he was careful to note that every fifth one of the enemy soldiers carried an automatic. He gave us a lot of helpful information."

To flush out the Red Koreans, American infantry threw in—as one officer said—even cooks and bottle-washers. Attacking on a 2500-yard front, the soldiers spread out searching each gully and tree clump for hidden Reds.

Machine-gun and small-arms fire crackled in the hills and the echoes made it seem like a regimental scale attack. Big 4.2-inch mortar shells were lobbing up from a field to the right and bursting in gray showers on the ridge.

In the command post—a concrete railway culvert—Capt. William J. Gillespie, Binghamton, N. Y., was calling for artillery on a corner of the hill.

"We've just located some enemy troops there," he said. "They have good observation on us and seem to know where we are. They've been pounding us every few minutes."

Walking up the big hill forward and directing his men personally was the battalion commander, Peter Clainos, a slender, wiry lieutenant colonel from Manchester, N. H.

With him were a radio operator and a veteran warrant officer acting as his runner. In a few moments the warrant officer, W. L. Hamblin of Fontana, Calif., came into the command post.

"We are on a hump looking directly at the Reds on another hill about 1000 yards away," he said. "You can see small groups of them. Whenever a mortar shell bursts, one of them runs and jumps into the hole. They seem to be gambling that two shells never hit in the same place."

He turned to the captain.

"The colonel wants the tanks to get out where they open up point-blank fire. Those guys are sitting up there looking down on us. The colonel wants the tanks to begin firing halfway up the hill and walk their fire right up to the top."

The tanks came out and did it. The sweating doughboys kept going up the hill. And the Reds finally started back toward the river.

Newsboys, winners in subscription contest, will have two days of fun at Atlantic City

With all expenses paid by The Post, the boys will take in the swimming, a 2-hour ocean cruise, the Boardwalk, Steel Pier and other sights of the resort.

The carriers went in special coaches on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. In Atlantic City they will stay at the Hotel Monticello.

The carriers were accompanied by Herman Lyerly, The Post's city home delivery manager, and five circulation supervisors.

Roosevelt's Status Uncertain

Marine Reserve Col. James Roosevelt will "be treated just like any other" volunteer reservist in the current call to active duty, the Marine Corps said yesterday.

It was pointed out that as a matter of Defense Department policy, members of Congress who hold reserve commissions would not be called unless they volunteer for active duty. Among Marine reservists on the Hill is Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), who has led a spectacular campaign against what he termed Red infiltration into the State Department.

In Roosevelt's case, a Marine Corps spokesman recalled that the call for the first 50,000 of the Corps' 80,000 reservists would be limited in great part to officers of the rank of captain and below except those specialists needed at once.

New Bill Would Draft Doctors and Dentists

A bill to subject doctors, dentists and other specialists to the draft was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Gurney.

Gurney, former chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, proposed that the Selective Service Act be amended to require registration of professional, technical and scientific persons up to age 45.

Senate to Occupy Courtroom

The Senate is going to do business Monday at a new stand.

A decision by the Democratic Policy Committee yesterday cleared the way for a weekend move of the Senate's meeting place from its regular chamber to the old Supreme Court room in the Capitol.

Whether the House will make a similar move, into its Ways and Means Committee room, may be decided Monday.

Moving days were in order to let workmen complete remodeling the two chambers. The first half of the remodeling was done last year while House and Senate worked in their temporary quarters.

The Senate decision was the outgrowth of recommendations by a committee headed by Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.) in charge of the Senate remodeling.

A parallel House committee, headed by Representative James W. Trimble (D., Ark.) discussed the House move yesterday with officials. Trimble said the group will meet again Monday.

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., (R., Mass.) said he was all for the move if it would save $150,000 or more. This was based on estimates of the added cost that would be run up by a delay in the remodeling project.

First Bayonet Attack Is Good For GI Morale

By Marguerite Higgins

With American Forward Units in Korea, Aug. 9 (NYHT).—It was exactly 3:45 a. m. and the company was two thirds on the way up the rocky hill when the order to "fix bayonet" sounded down the line.

"They are swarming down on us off the crest," yelled company Comdr. Frederick T. Griffiths. "We are going to fix bayonets and charge. Fire and keep firing. We've been after these guys a long time. This is our chance—Let's go."

This was the first American bayonet charge of the war. It was by a green company in their first contact with the enemy. But within an hour and a half it had driven the astonished North Koreans back over the hill, down its rear slope, from another hill and into a village. By 10 a. m. the village was being taken care of by artillery fire.

"I was damn proud of those kids. I wanted to tell it to Stalin himself," Captain Griffiths, who comes from Cleveland, Ohio, said. "I told them never to cease firing and, boy, they didn't. It's like a tomato fight. If the other guy has the tomatoes and you've got nothing to throw at him, you get murdered. But if you keep hurling tomatoes too and you've got better aim, he gets murdered. This time we had more tomatoes and better aim . . ."

The youngsters in the company which this morning led the American attack toward Chinju were flushed with their first taste of victory. They greeted this reporter with "Hey, just call us killer company from now on, Lady."

"The gooks were just plain astonished when they saw us charging with fixed bayonets," related First Lieut. LeRoy Burke, an Oklahoman. "I guess they didn't know that we went in for hand-to-hand fighting, too."

Lieutenant Burke himself killed—somewhat by accident—a North Korean with his bayonet.

"My carbine jammed," the lieutenant explained, "and a gook was practically on top of me. I threw a hand grenade but it didn't stop him. But when he got close enough I somehow managed to hit him over the head and then I finished him off with the bayonet."

"Killer Company" captured lots of equipment left behind by the enemy, including 2½-ton trucks stranded at the bottom of the hill. At the top of the hill American soldiers found lots of personal articles which to the company disgust consisted almost exclusively of soaps and cigarettes captured earlier from the Americans. Among the weapons recaptured today were two American machine guns.

Captain Griffiths estimated the enemy attack in this sector involved some 80 to 100 men who, of course, had every advantage since they were sweeping down from a hillcrest. Despite this advantage our own casualties were extremely light, whereas the enemy, according to the captain, lost some 20 men killed and an unknown number of wounded.

Discussing the performance of his men, Captain Griffiths said he had taken over the company two weeks before in garrison. "So in the assembly area before setting out this morning," the captain said, "we all clasped hands and took a pledge that nobody would retreat. And nobody did. They answered the first gook fire with a full clip.

Senate Drubs Truman on Nominations, Rejects Hutchinson, Switzer, Hook, Andrews

By The Associated Press

The Senate yesterday handed President Truman his worst drubbing of the season on nominations for Federal jobs, turning down four men named to major office.

They were:

Carroll O. Switzer for Southern Iowa Federal judge.

M. Neil Andrews for Northern Georgia Federal judge.

Martin A. Hutchinson of Virginia for Federal Trade Commissioner.

Frank E. Hook, former Michigan Democratic Representative, for membership on the Motor Carrier Claims Commission.

Three Opposed by Democrats

Three were opposed by Democrats and the fourth—Hook—by Republican Senator Ferguson of Michigan.

Only one of the four nominations, that of Hutchinson, went to a roll call yesterday. It was turned down 59 to 14.

Switzer has been serving under a recess appointment since last October, but he was first nominated in May last year. He got the recess assignment when Congress at the 1949 session failed to act.

Senator Gillette (D., Iowa), led the fight against Switzer, who ran for Governor of Iowa on the Democratic ticket in 1948 and lost. Gillette called the nomination a "direct affront" to him. Gillette said he had recommended other men for the post. Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), also opposed Switzer.

Hook ran against Senator Ferguson in the 1948 Michigan senatorial race and lost by about 45,000 votes. He has been serving in the $15,000-a-year claims post since last October under a recess appointment.

Political Foe of Byrd

Hutchinson, a Richmond lawyer, was opposed by Senators Byrd and Robertson, Virginia Democrats. They contended Hutchinson, a political foe of Byrd, was not qualified for the $15,000-a-year Trade Commission job.

In a letter to Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) of the Commerce Committee, the two Senators said Hutchinson "lacks judicial temperament and exhibits a blind support of public policies merely because such are advocated by certain party leaders."

Hutchinson ran against Byrd for the Democratic senatorial nomination in 1946.

Hutchinson got support on the floor from Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.), who contended the committee record shows him to be "more than qualified."

Andrews was opposed by Senators George and Russell, Georgia Democrats. They based their opposition on the fact that they were not consulted on the selection of the Atlanta lawyer.

The Senate did confirm Oliver S. Powell of Minnesota by voice vote to be a member of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors for a term ending February 1, 1952. Powell will serve out a term of the late Lawrence Clayton.

Clark Holds Narrow Lead Over Taylor

D. WORTH CLARK

. . . forges ahead of Sen. Taylor

By The Associated Press

Incumbent Glen H. Taylor was still trailing former Senator D. Worth Clark last night in their see-saw battle for Idaho's Democratic six-year term Senate nomination.

But Clark's lead was cut to slightly more than 1000 yesterday as returns from Tuesday's primary rolled in from outlying districts.

The count in 743 of 839 precincts showed: Clark, 26,164; Taylor, 25,146. A third man, Representative Compton White, had 14,106.

Only small and scattered precincts remained to be tabulated.

The closeness of the race recalled the one in 1944 when an official canvass two weeks after the primary showed Taylor won by only 216 votes.

Only a plurality is necessary to win in Idaho, making a run-off unnecessary.

Should Taylor lose, he would be the fifth incumbent Senator—and the fourth Democrat—to go down to defeat in 1950 contests. Nominations have now been made for 25 of the 36 senatorships to be decided in November.

Previous losers were Senators Pepper (D., Fla.), Graham (D., N. C.), Thomas (D., Okla.), and Gurney (R., S. D.).

Returns from Nebraska's Tuesday primary showed another nip-and-tuck race, this one for the Democratic governorship nomination. A state canvassing board may have to decide the winner between former State Legislator Walter R. Raecke and former Representative Terry Carpenter.

Raecke hung to a lead of more than 1000 with returns from all but 51 of the 2074 precincts.

Republican Gov. Val Petersen won renomination easily, and all the State's four Congressmen were renominated.

In Idaho's second senatorial race, Senator Henry C. Dworshak won the Republican nomination for a four-year term over former Representative Abe McGregor Goff and Fantress Kuhn, Boise businessman. Claude J. Burtenshaw, political science professor at Ricks College, appeared the winner of the Democratic nomination.

State Senator Herman Welker held to a sizable lead for the Idaho Republican Senate six-year term nomination, over Representative John C. Sanborn and Gov. C. A. Robins. The latter was running third.

Calvin E. Wright, former State auditor, and Len Jordan, Grangeville businessman, won the Democratic and Republican nominations, respectively for governor of Idaho.

Votes reported the above candidates:

Democratic, four-year Senate—729 precincts, Burtenshaw, 16,721; Holden, 13,073; Summerfield, 13,270; Bistling, 9687; Swope, 7605.

'Spoiled' by Easy Life, Man Asks $500 Alimony

Los Angeles, Aug. 9 (AP).—A life of ease with his wealthy wife has "spoiled" him, says former Marine Edward F. Boozer, 37, and that's why he needs $500 monthly alimony.

He testified yesterday that Mrs. Joyce Primrose Boozer, 44, gave him expensive gifts, including a $5000 car that cost $50 a month to run. His suit is in reply to her divorce action, which charges adultery. Boozer said he is partially deaf and has a bad knee, both war injuries.

Major Shakeup in AEC Setup Would Be Tragic, Wilson Says

By the United Press

Carroll L. Wilson, retiring general manager of the Atomic Energy Commission, said yesterday it will be "a tragic thing" if his departure is the signal for a major shake-up in AEC personnel.

Any attempt to scatter the "darn good team" which is managing the Nation's A-bomb program would be an "awful blow" at this country's position in the atomic-arms race with Russia, he asserted.

He made the statement after members of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee predicted that his resignation will be followed by a "top-to-bottom housecleaning" to rid the AEC of "the Lilienthal influence."

Wilson, who was closely associated with former AEC Chairman David E. Lilienthal, resigned Tuesday with the blunt explanation that he lacks confidence in the new chairman, Gordon Dean.

Informed quarters said Wilson was dismayed at what he considers the subservience of Dean to the Congressional committee, headed by Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), Dean's former law partner.

Reports that Wilson quit in protest against a military power grab, in which the armed forces took over effective control of the A-bomb program from the civilian commission, were emphatically denied. "There has been no change in the existing good working relationship between the AEC and the armed forces," he said.

Limiting Taxis

Limitation of the number of taxicabs on Washington's streets is an old controversy which the approval of the Beall bill by the House District Committee has revived at an inopportune time. That bill, and the companion O'Conor bill in the Senate, would empower the Public Utilities Commission to determine a maximum limit on the number of taxicabs and to enforce the limitation, not by revoking existing licenses, but by halting issuance of new licenses until the proper number of cabs was reached through attrition. The trouble lies in two amendments, one permitting the transfer of licenses and the other postponing the effective date of the limitation until January 1. Uncontrolled transfer of licenses would, of course, make attrition hopelessly slow. Moreover, the mere mention of the bill so far has had the effect of drastically increasing the number of licenses; the PUC has had requests for 400 new licenses in the past three weeks.

From the standpoint of individual drivers there is an obvious advantage in limitation. There is no denying that cab competition in Washington is tough, and that many drivers have to be on the streets 12 or more hours a day in order to make a living. Fatigue becomes a factor here; it is questionable whether any person can be really alert after driving that long. On the other hand, the fact that there are so many taxicabs here has made Washington a cab-minded town, and it is more than likely that drivers have benefited from volume of trade. Also, the fact that Washington will be the center of mobilization efforts makes limitation questionable at this time.

In a free enterprise system which encourages competition, the criterion of regulation ought to be the public interest and not the financial status of any particular group. The only real justification for limitation on the number of cabs would lie in traffic congestion, safety or abuse of cab privileges. If Congress really wants to be helpful, however, it might again consider the elimination of unfair competition from part-time cab drivers who skim the cream off the traffic for full-time operators. Some limitation that only such licenses as are actually in use may be held by any individual or company might also be beneficial. The real stickler, of course, is the zone system which, for the convenience of Congressmen more than that of the public, takes advantage of cab drivers with an unfairly low rate over much too large a downtown area.

The Consumer Pays

Testifying recently before the Senate Banking Committee on the Administration's defense production bill, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer said, speaking of copper, "Even without the addition of a new program for military purposes, and without the addition of an accelerated stockpile program, the heavy demands for copper, combined with the low level of working stocks, would mean that supply would be inadequate and consumers would meet increasing difficulty in obtaining supplies. The expanded military and stockpile program will of necessity reduce the amount available for civilian use and will create shortages and hardships to industries dependent on this important material." The result, therefore, of retaining the 2-cent import "tax" on copper imports, suspended in 1947 and restored at the end of last June, would be to give another boost to copper prices which are now about 22½ cents a pound—close to the postwar peak—contrasted with a 16-cent 1949 low.

Since the domestic supply of copper is not equal to the domestic demand, the levy will probably have little immediate effect on the volume of imports, but it will be reflected, no doubt, in higher prices paid by consumers for automobiles, household appliances and other products that call for the use of copper. Furthermore, it is extremely shortsighted to endanger our relations with copper-exporting countries, especially Chile, upon whom we depend to supplement domestic supplies of copper. Finally, it is a foregone conclusion that copper will be one of the basic materials that will have to be subjected to controls, since, with or without the tax on imports, it will be in short supply. Unless controls over allocations are combined with some form of price control, whether voluntary or compulsory, therefore, the stage will be set for a further rise in copper prices that would be accelerated by retention of the import tax. If it should become necessary to stimulate the production of domestic copper, the way to do so would be to subsidize high-cost marginal producers, as was done during World War II, instead of raising prices all along the line and at the expense of consumers and taxpayers.

Nevertheless the Senate Finance Committee has tabled a bill passed by the House to continue suspension of the import tax for another year. Thus the country is confronted by the strange spectacle of a Senate committee approving a procedure that would raise the prices of an important strategic material, while Congress is considering a control program designed to keep prices from rising. Fortunately there is still a chance that the Senate will repair the damage done by its Finance Committee in placing the interests of a special group above those of the Nation by passing the suspension bill in the form of an amendment from the floor to other legislation.

Mission To The Vatican

At his news conference last week President Truman made it known that he is considering the nomination of a regular diplomatic mission to the Vatican. The arguments in favor of this project outweigh, in our opinion, any possible arguments that can be brought against it; indeed we have yet seen no argument to the contrary that has had any sounder basis than historical prejudice. Since the Lateran Treaty of 1929, the Vatican has been a sovereign state; and though it is territorially insignificant, its ruler commands a powerful influence in world affairs. In the political sphere this influence is being exerted along lines that are in many respects parallel to those of current American policy, especially so in the question of international communism.

It requires more than ordinary confusion of mind to suppose that the reestablishment of formal diplomatic relationships with the Vatican in any way implies an official indorsement of the religious tenets of the Roman Catholic Church, or an encouragement of its temporal ambitions. Nor would the American principle of separation of church and state be compromised by such a mission, any more than is the case with the diplomatic missions to other countries which have established churches or whose heads of state combine the functions of spiritual and temporal rulers. The proof of this is to be found in the fact that the governments of Protestant and anticlerical and even non-Christian countries have found it of advantage to engage in diplomatic relationships with the Vatican. The Imperial Japanese government, for example, retained its embassy at the Vatican until the moment of surrender to the American forces.

Nor would the creation of an American mission to the Vatican establish any precedent. An American consulate was maintained at Rome from the adoption of the Constitution and the organization of the Department of State until the collapse of the temporal power of the papacy in 1870. In 1848 a full legation was established there and was continued until 1867. It proved enormously useful to Secretary Seward in his efforts to defeat the purposes of the Confederate emissaries who were seeking recognition by European governments. This mission was never formally recalled; but in 1867 Congress, against the protests of Seward and of Rufus King, the Minister to the Papal States, withdrew the appropriation under which the legation had been operating.

At the end of 1939 President Roosevelt appointed Mr. Myron Taylor as his personal representative to the Vatican. He was eager to reach an understanding with the Pope concerning certain aspects of the policies he was about to launch, to offset the influence of the embassies maintained at the Vatican by the Axis powers, and to give the United States the benefit of an ear at the most advantageous listening post in western Europe. In this way Mr. Roosevelt circumvented the necessity of obtaining congressional approval. There is little doubt that the presence of Mr. Taylor at the Vatican throughout the war years was of incalculable benefit to the United States. Mr. Truman saw fit, despite the vociferous opposition of certain organized Protestant groups, to continue Mr. Taylor in this capacity. But Mr. Taylor's resignation has left the post vacant.

It is possible, perhaps even probable, that prejudice may even at this stage of affairs be strong enough to block senatorial confirmation of Mr. Truman's plan to nominate a regular diplomatic representative. But this is the sort of prejudice that the country can now ill afford. Those who are familiar with the operations of diplomacy know very well that matters frequently arise upon which consultation with the leadership of the Catholic Church is either necessary or desirable. These consultations are now held indirectly and unofficially and often through the mediacy of members of the American Catholic hierarchy. But it would be far more satisfactory on all counts if they were held directly with the Pope himself.

The Turning Worm

Mr. Henry Wallace, for some years the foremost of our fellow travelers, and the American Communists have now arrived at the parting of the ways. He has resigned from the Progressive Party, which almost everybody except himself long ago recognized to be an instrument in the hands of the Stalinist conspirators. The best that can be said for Mr. Wallace is that although his awakening has come later than most, it has come at last.

It is evident that Mr. Wallace has been going through some pretty strenuous sessions with his conscience of late. Almost a year ago he began publicly to express doubts that the protestations by Soviet Russia of its devotion to the cause of peace were as ingenuous and sincere as he had once supposed them to be. In September he brought down upon himself the displeasure of his associates by refusing to become the candidate of the American Labor Party for United States Senator from New York. On the same day he made a speech denouncing the game of power politics as it was then being played (according to his view) not only by the United States but also by Soviet Russia. And he went so far as to attack those who might be tempted to use the Progressive Party as a vehicle of Soviet policy.

A few months later he began to have doubts about the Progressive Party itself. But at the national convention of the party in Chicago last February, he insisted that they were in error who supposed it to be a mere "puppet of the Reds," and by way of proof prevailed upon the delegates to adopt a resolution asserting that both the United States and Russia had been guilty of "mistakes." He still believed it was possible for both sides to rise above those mistakes and to find a modus vivendi in the interests of peace.

What finished Mr. Wallace with the comrades was the Korean war. Here he felt himself obliged to choose sides, and the side he chose, in words resembling those of Decatur, was "the side of my country and the United Nations." He was promptly repudiated by the party. It was thus made unmistakable, even to him, who controls the party machinery. It was also made evident that the comrades were fully prepared to wreck the party rather than permit it to approve any important deviation from the current Communist line. The probability is that a great many of the innocents who were lured into its ranks by Mr. Wallace's supposed leadership will now follow him into political homelessness.

It is also probable that Mr. Wallace, by his breach with the comrades, has ceased forever to be an important factor in American political life. From now on he is likely to be a target of abuse from those who were so recently his loudest panegyrists. And so, although Mr. Wallace's behavior for the last five or six years has utterly destroyed whatever reputation he might once have had for political intelligence, he has nevertheless managed to salvage something of his reputation for genuine, if muddle-headed, idealism.

First Things First

A note of warning on civil defense in urban centers has been provided by James M. Landis, writing in the New York Times. Mr. Landis was National Director of the Office of Civilian Defense during 1941 and 1942. Experience in those years, says Mr. Landis, showed that the central problem in civilian defense is "the source of authority for the promulgation of civilian defense regulations," and that it was never settled. How much more important is the problem now that American cities are subject to attack! "Of course, cooperation between the municipalities, the States and the Federal Government," says Mr. Landis, "will always be necessary, but, in the event of disaster, clear lines of authority must be present. Even the Continental Congress was aware of that. In the absence of a clear answer to the central question, planning for civilian defense will merely hobble along."

The suggestion from Mr. Landis comes as one city at least, Philadelphia, is preparing to work out regional plans with its surrounding communities, including several in New Jersey, for concerted civilian defense, in spite of the difficult barrier of rival statehood and differences in method and scope of permissible municipal activity. Other cities are going forward with similar discussions. In New York a committee under Mayor O'Dwyer is studying a plan for bomb shelters under parks and playgrounds which could in peacetime be used for underground parking. But there is little other local activity. Most communities, perhaps, are awaiting the report of the civilian defense branch of the National Security Resources Board before doing anything. This report, due in early September, is expected to explain to States and cities what steps are necessary in order of importance. Though the report will be a contribution to orderly procedure, the first step, it seems to us, is the suggestion made by Mr. Landis.

Death Of A Killer

In this day of rapine, disaster and war it is reassuring to be able to report that at least one ruthless mankiller has been brought to a deserved fate. In faraway Khartoum, "Asad the Assassin," a mankilling lion, has been speared to death by natives. Asad had killed seven natives, mauled three others, and spread fear through an entire countryside, as do mankillers everywhere, before a party of resolute men organized a planned assault, and stalked him to the death.

There were many curious people in those parts who decided to examine the body of the dead Asad so as to find out the secret of his unusual prowess. Lo and behold! It was found that he had few teeth and was thus driven "to easily killed human prey." It was said that the ruthless Asad once ran in fright when a confronted housewife pulled his tail. The good woman hitherto had not been believed, but now her credibility was established, and the inquest ended on a note of foolishness fit only for a modern Aesop.

ALWAYS FERNS

Up through the leaf mold;
Fern first, fawn grey,
Curled close, high, higher,
Fan spread to wood's day.
All through the oak wood
Deep into May-leaf light,
Cool, cool,
Rain dipped, dew sprung;
Hill, bank, marsh, pool,
All bold fern world.

Never a month, never a day—
Heat crisped, frost curled,
Rock tipped, root swirled,
Somehow, somewhere, fern fronds
Or live core
Or green fingers in earth's lap
Busy, busy, busy with growing;
Or waiting, waiting, for spring sap;
Locked bronze or brave green,
Winter quiet in earth's lap.

Pellegrini's Job

Your editorial of August 4, "Maritime Push," dealing with the formation of a Labor-Management Committee in the maritime industry, contains a statement to the effect that Mr. Frank Pellegrini, one of the codirectors of the new organization, is now counsel to the Subcommittee on Merchant Marine and Maritime Matters, Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. This statement is in error. Mr. Pellegrini severed all connection with the Senate on July 26.

Equalized Burden

Since the beginning of the Korean police action, I believe they call it, and not war, all we have heard from the highest politician to the least commentator is the evils of hoarding by the housewife. Certainly hoarding is not a patriotic thing to do.

But the housewife has her side of the story.

How about life imprisonment and one hundred thousand dollar fines for the politicians in Washington and elsewhere who have spent 48 billions and have next to nothing to show for it? Also the ones who spent 75 millions for cookbooks for Congressmen to mail out to the voters at public expense, the $2500 medal, the fleet of ultra luxurious automobiles, political trips under the guise of dedicating a dam, not to mention the millions of dollars worth of good foodstuffs that are either destroyed or allowed to rot? We are in a war, our young men are dying, and I believe everyone should assume his responsibility and burden. There should be no profiteering for anyone and that means politicians, businessmen, laborers or 10 percenters.

Franco's Foes

Anti-Spain and anti-Franco sentiment is an interesting indication of American intellectual captivity at the hands of fellow-travelers in important segments of the journalistic and literary fields. The Communist line, in an unscrupulous simplification, presented the Spanish struggle as a battle between democracy and fascism and party friends and/or dupes have spread this gospel tirelessly and without regard to cost.

Getting back on the road to truth in all things is worth while—because the alternative is to rush madly like the proverbial swine into the sea. It is important to make the choice while we still have the right to be selective. The old saying that the American public likes to be fooled has become a tragic truism. ANN ROTHSCHILD.

Segregated Restaurants

How are colored citizens to know which restaurant or hotel will or will not serve them? In the nearby environs of Virginia, a State law exercises the restrictions of segregated restaurant and hotel facilities to the Negro; but here in the District of Columbia there is no legal segregation in public places. The only law that we have on record in regard to this matter, specifically states, without implication, that it is a crime to deny service to Negro citizens in public places.

It is my opinion that if this old statute is not to be enforced and is to be judged archaic and is to be repealed by the "implication" of tradition or custom, a business establishment deciding not to obey the law ought to make its intentions plainly visible to the general public. A large sign should be placed in plain, unambiguous terms in front of each of these places: "White People Only." In addition, the sign should be printed in several languages to avoid embarrassment to our foreign visitors.

This procedure would save our colored citizens a great deal of injury to their pride and relieve innumerable embarrassing situations. The disadvantage of such a procedure is readily seen, however, when one imagines how soon Mr. Stalin and Co. would take pictures of these signs and use such pictures as grist for the mills of Russian propaganda.

We must be fair! Either put up the signs or let Negroes into public places without discrimination. No subtle dodges! Let us have a categoric statement.

Point IV Code

The war in Korea, even though a police action on behalf of the United Nations, and the widespread fear there may be similar outbreaks elsewhere, challenge the American people to get the U. N. to make a plan for peace, to prevent such outbreaks, instead of policing them. They are obviously based upon widespread poverty and discontent, not upon propaganda for revolutionary action, which is not self-generating.

Point IV, if under the U. N., would help, provided that the fear that it would be followed by exploitation of peoples and of natural resources could be prevented.

The United Nations should draft a world-wide code of conduct for capital and concessions abroad and devise a plan for international control of natural resources, and international allocation of markets, to prevent world conflicts over resources and markets.

Heft's Boost

If Povich must take a vacation, I cannot think of a better replacement than Herb (Wondrous Nats) Heft to keep us informed about our fifth-place heroes. There is a fellow who always says something to keep up our hopes if there is fact to support him. This I prefer to the unfeeling cynics who are always waiting for a chance to pan the team.

After all, the Nats are our team. I noticed, too, that with Heft's presence the Nats won their first double-header of the season, and against the St. Louis Browns, previous "jinx" team to the Nats. Congratulations to The Washington Post for "wunnerful" Povich and "Wondrous" Heft. Now if the Nats can get a little more "Heft" in their hitting. EDWARD WALKER.

Troop Positions

If that 155-mm. Marine artillery battery (August 7, Washington Post) is still operating, it's through no fault of the AP correspondent who wrote the article.

With such a clear description of its position in the last paragraph; "the first gun to fire was set up in a schoolyard against a backdrop of green mountains. The weather-beaten schoolhouse with unswept roof corners was in a yard enclosed by a 7-foot rock wall," it probably didn't take long for the North Koreans familiar with the locale to throw in heavy counterfire to knock out the entire battery.

Yes, it's good to have true, factual reporting of the news, but when a reporter resorts to such facts as would pin-point American troop positions to fill up space and thus endanger American lives, maybe "voluntary censorship" isn't enough.

Chiang Misleads MacArthur

Since no official report has been received as yet regarding the details of the meeting which took place between General MacArthur and Generalissimo Chiang in Formosa, it is too early to judge the consequence of the commitment this country has plunged into. However, by watching the steps which have already been taken by General MacArthur after his return, it is more than clear that the generalissimo's men have pulled the wool over General MacArthur's eyes, with knowledge that the latter has not been equipped with full information which can only be obtained from Chiang's government.

One of the most conspicuous cases is that of aviation gasoline. The other day the newspapers disclosed that General MacArthur had rushed a fuel tank from Tokyo to Formosa in response to one of the most urgent requests of the Chinese Nationalists. The true purpose of the Nationalists' request for aviation gasoline is entirely political, since they are not suffering a shortage of supply at all. Their aim is to mire this country deeper in the recent Asiatic trouble; thus, it will not only bail them out of the present dilemma, but will give them a new chance to exploit the mainland as well. No matter how small a quantity of aviation gasoline is supplied by General MacArthur to the Nationalists, the effect, which gives the Nationalists a weapon for malicous propaganda, is just the same.

It is known to every knowledgeable person in this country that the aimless bombings of the Nationalist air force on the mainland of China have no military value at all, but only deepen the hatred of the Chinese masses against this country and aid Communists in convincing the Asiatic people that we are the true troublemakers.

We do not have to plunge into an elaborate investigation to find out that the Nationalist leaders misled General MacArthur in regard to the shortage of aviation gasoline. Let us just look at the records of the Office of International Trade of the Department of Commerce, which show clearly that the stockpile of 100-grade aviation gasoline only, belonging to the Chinese air force as of the end of July amounted to 4,200,000 gallons, which is more than enough for their requirements for half a year.

The Department of Commerce has promptly issued all licenses in regard to aviation gasoline. Yet, a license for three million gallons of 100-grade aviation gasoline which was issued in February and remained in effect up to June, was never used by the Nationalists. Have they insufficient funds to make the shipment? Not at all. They have much more money than we could ever think of!

More Medical Preparedness

By Malvina Lindsay

Wider Use Of Women

AT THE END of the last war the Soviet Union had more women than men physicians. This was not because Soviet leaders wanted to be nice, or even fair to women—who had no more voice than they have now in higher government councils.

It was because of a desperate need for doctors, both civilian and military, also because women functioned well in medical roles, and augmented manpower. Hence medical ranks were opened to them as freely as to men.

Such astute realism is needed now in this country's medical preparedness. Yet strangely there is still a school of thought in the armed services, in the medical profession, and in Congress that is either blind to the implications of atomic defense, or that links women irrevocably with pots, pans and typewriters, or their equivalent.

Whatever the end result of the Korean conflict, more effort in medical preparedness is urgently needed and will never be wasted. Women, if given a chance, would bring a fervor of devotion to a service that deals with healing rather than destruction. Moreover that service is crying for recruits.

Hence a bill to give women doctors opportunity to become officers in a United States military Medical Corps on a permanent basis, now being revised by a Senate Armed Forces Subcommittee, becomes of much more importance than when it was put into senatorial mothballs in June 1949.

IN THE LAST war women doctors and surgeons were appointed to the Army Medical Corps under special emergency legislation, their service being limited to the duration plus six months. Last year the House passed a bill to restore such appointments, but on a permanent basis, thus opening Army careers to women medical specialists on a par with men.

The Senate ignored the bill until the Korean war brought up the need for doctors as the armed services expanded. Now the question of having the bill include all branches of the armed forces has arisen.

In hearings before the Senate subcommittee the Army spoke for it, the Navy against it. Navy spokesmen wanted to keep women doctors on the same basis with other women in the Navy so they could be used in "accordance with their physical qualifications for military duty."

Oddly enough, some senatorial questioning of the bill is based on the retirement difficulties it would bring up in view of what is called "women's physical condition at 50." Yet on every hand medical authorities are warning about men's physical vulnerability in their 50's, and instancing women's tougher hold on life than men and their greater resistance to disease.

THE ARMY has already experimented to find how good women would be in the military medical field in an emergency. A "Female Staffing Test" of a year at a Massachusetts hospital showed that women could effectively take over about nine-tenths of all jobs in a general Army hospital outside a combat zone. Such a hospital would require some men for specialized services. But women doctors, dentists, laboratory technicians, business administrators and workers could fill with complete efficiency 247 of the 301 types of jobs, a report to the Army Surgeon General's Office shows.

Moreover, if some of the present need for military preparedness should abate, there would still be a shortage of doctors, nurses, other medical experts to staff the new civilian hospitals now being built, to care for the increasing number of the chronically ill, and of the mentally ill, to meet the demands of a growing population.

If women are to be encouraged to enter military medical service, they will need assurance of permanent career opportunities. One reason the Army had an adequate supply of nurses in the Far East when Korean hostilities broke out was that legislation during the war had given nurses full officer status with all the benefits of the Regular Army.

Prejudice and discrimination against women doctors are responsible for there being relatively few of them in the country today. Giving women doctors more status in the armed forces would help the prestige and opportunity of women generally in the medical field and encourage more women to enter the profession.

Impatient Autoists

As a guest and motorist in these parts, may I say a bit about the traffic congestion and short-patienced inhabitants? I never before heard such screams as rent the air if one attempts to read the lampposts for location. In most instances these are placed on the far side of the street from the person at the wheel.

Horns blatantly reprimand one if he needs to inquire where Constitution ave. is. No small wonder, because to lessen one's pace on these hazardous streets with cars parked every inch along the curbstone and traffic moving in both directions, in most instances, causes inconvenience to many.

It's a pity a neighbor's license plate arouses the ire of the plain citizen, likewise the patrolman.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Diplomatic Counteroffensive

IT IS interesting, and it may be useful, to see how the argument, which Mr. Malik has developed about the Korean war, works out elsewhere.

Lippmann

But first I must point out again that Mr. Malik, like Mr. Gromyko a month ago, uses two quite contradictory arguments — one, as H. L. Mencken would say, addressed to the booboisie, and the other to the intelligentsia. To the simple-minded, illiterate and uninformed masses he broadcasts the shameless lie that the United States ordered South Korea to attack on June 25. To the better informed and the influential, especially inside Asia, he is arguing, not that North Korea was attacked by South Korea but, that North Korea had the right to attack South Korea, had the right to wage civil war against South Korea, and that nobody has a right to interfere in a civil war.

THIS second argument, which Mr. Malik has developed with considerable skill, is to be taken seriously. In respect to Korea the answer to Mr. Malik was made conclusively on June 25 by Ambassador Gross. It is that the Korean Republic, which has been invaded, "is a state which the United Nations itself, by action of its General Assembly, has brought into being." Therefore, in the eyes of the United Nations this cannot be a civil war but it is "armed aggression against the government elected under United Nations supervision." This is the answer to Mr. Malik's argument that the Korean war, like the American civil war and like the Chinese civil war, is an internal matter, and not to be intefered with.

But when this argument about civil war is extended to Formosa, Mr. Malik is less easily answered. Our own position is vulnerable and it is also unclear, and there is good reason to think, as I suggested in my preceding article, that the Soviet diplomatic offensive is designed to exploit our differences with our allies over China and our entanglement with the remnants of Chiang's government. Our position should be clarified after consulting the leading friendly powers of Asia and of Europe, and our vulnerability should be reduced by disavowing the unilateralism and arbitrariness which the President's statement suggested.

LET US turn now to the wider application of Mr. Malik's argument that civil wars are lawful under the Charter and that intervention in a civil war is aggression. This doctrine suits the Soviet interest very well in the Far East—in China, Indo-China, and Southeast Asia generally, where the revolutionary forces in alliance with Moscow could win easily if British, French, and American intervention were excluded.

But applied to Europe, Mr. Malik's argument, if it is to be trusted, is favorable to peace. Neither Yugoslavia nor Turkey is threatened by civil war, and any attack by Bulgaria or Hungary would, on Mr. Malik's thesis, be indisputably an act of aggression. The opportunity to establish this point clearly and promptly should not be overlooked.

IN FACT, if we can find some way out of our embarrassment about Formosa and Indo-China, there may be even greater opportunities in Mr. Malik's reviving now the definition of aggression which Mr. Litvinov submitted to the Geneva Conference on Security Questions in 1933, which the United Kingdom, France, and the United States agreed to. For under this definition of aggression neither the Red Army nor a satellite army can invade western Germany or western Europe or Scandinavia or Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey, and Iran, It would be well to have this spelled out.

Furthermore, Mr. Malik's emphasis on the Soviet definition of aggression is, in view of the Korean war, almost an invitation, at the least it is permission, to proceed at once in Japan and in western Germany to organize military forces able to suppress insurrection and civil war. On Mr. Malik's argument it is now imperative that there be Germans able to deal with Germans and Japanese with Japanese in case of civil war. If there is no civil war in Germany, then on Mr. Malik's thesis, there will be no international war which begins in Germany and crosses Europe.

NOW IT MAY be said of course that if and when the Kremlin wants to invade Europe, it will not be stopped by what Mr. Litvinov said in 1933 or Mr. Malik in 1950. No doubt. But the purpose of our armaments and of the Atlantic Pact is to convince the Kremlin that it would not be safe to want to go to war, that whatever cities and provinces the Red Army overran, Russia itself would be subjected not only to severe damage but to a long struggle in which the American power would grow ever greater.

I see no reason to suppose that the Kremlin does not take our military power seriously, or that Stalin does not know that Korea is no more a test of American power than Finland was of the Soviet power.

AND SO it does not seem to me soft and gullible to base our own diplomatic counter-offensive on the theory that the Kremlin is deterred by American power, and is still determined not to commit its own forces in a war. And if that is so, then the 1933 definition of aggression might well be used as the principle on which the Security Council now, and the General Assembly later, could bring on the showdown, which must be had, if the little war in Korea is not to degenerate into an ever bigger war.

Russian Production

By Marquis Childs

War Economy Vs. Peace Economy

SOMEBODY has catalogued falsehood as lies, damned lies and statistics. In the last classification put those glowingly optimistic comparisons of Russian production figures with American production figures.

Childs

Nothing could be more phony or more calculated to lull opinion in this country into easy complacency. And at this moment the one thing we really cannot afford is complacency.

Take steel production, for example. A recent estimate puts Russian production for 1950 at roughly 25 million tons. American production is put at 97 million tons in igot production. This looks good for our side.

But then look at figures on the production of motor vehicles. A figure currently used for the Soviet Union is 400,000. Whether this includes trucks as well as passenger cars is not clear.

The pre-Korean estimate for this country was eight million motor vehicles. Car production is still running at this record-high level. Congress has not yet passed a bill authorizing the President to cut the number of passenger cars being made. And when the bill is passed, it will take time to put the cutbacks into effect.

That is the significant comparison—400,000 against eight million. The number of tractors to be produced in Russia for the current year is put at 99,000.

OF AMERICA'S mighty 97 million-ton steel production, an estimated 2 percent was going to military uses before the Korean war. That is approximately the rate today, since the speeding up of the armaments program is still in the paper-and-planning stage.

The percentage of Russia's 25 million tons that goes for military purposes is not known. But it would be a safe guess that this is not less than 10 percent and is probably nearer 20 percent. It may be much higher than that.

I saw an estimate recently that the Russian peasant in czarist days never used more than 5½ pounds of iron in his entire life. This has unquestionably increased under the industrialization of the past 33 years. But the contrast must be striking even today in view of our ownership of motorcars, refrigerators and every other kind of gadget.

Obviously, then, our superiority in steel production is only a potential insofar as military strength is concerned. And, as American troops have discovered in Korea, you can't kill an enemy with your potential.

The immediate task is to translate at least a part of this potential into actuality—into tanks and guns and planes. Here again there is certainly no reason for complacency. This process may take much longer than most people have realized.

SOME glib talk has been heard to the effect that we are more fortunate this time since production is at capacity levels and everyone is at work. There may be something in it.

But to convert from peacetime to war production could take longer than to start brand-new assembly lines and train new workers. British and French military orders placed in 1940 and 1941 helped get America geared up for war production. The British and French orders could be handled quickly because of the slack in our industrial system at that time.

The fact is that we have excelled the world in the arts of peace; in the remarkable variety and richness of the way most of us have lived. Take as an illustration a comparison of production figures in another category—shoes.

A recent estimate for the Soviet Union is 197 millions pairs for the current year. For most purposes the population figure for Russia is put at 200 millions. So there will be less than enough new shoes for each Soviet citizen to have one pair.

Now take the United States. For the first four months of this year production was 148,500,000 pairs, which included playshoes and sandals. That is nearly enough to give every citizen a pair and if production continues at this rate the average will be roughly three pairs to a person. And, by the way, that doesn't include athletic shoes and slippers, of which about 12 million pairs were made in the United States in the first four months.

If this means one thing above all else it is that time is our priceless commodity. We cannot know in our present state of defenselessness how much time we have. But the more of this priceless commodity that is wasted, the more nearly is disaster invited.

Wire-Tap Admitted in Report of around $100. The Senator said that had not been raached.

Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) has told reportes he paid Shimon about $100 or $125 in 1947 for expenses of Shimon's investigating a man shadowing the Senator.

At the time Brewster headed the committee probing war contracts of Howard Hughes, millionaire plane maker.

Hughes Tapping Covered

Alleged tapping of a telephone in Hughes' suite in a Washington hotel has been reported as one of the matters covered by the police report.

Senator Brewster, and his administrative assistant, Mrs. Frances Dustin, have been witnesses before the wire tapping grand jury.

Barrett and other police officers have also testified to the grand jury.

A near-dramatic note was given to the closed-door meeting by the arrival of Attorney General J. Howard McGrath. He stepped off the elevator near the Senate District Committee room, where last year he presided as chairman, but turned in the other direction. A reporter asked if his visit had anything to do with the wire tapping inquiry. McGrath said "no," that he was there to call on Senate Secretary Leslie C. Biffle.

Like a Jig-Saw Puzzle Now

Senator Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N. J.), ranking Republican member of the Pepper inquiry committee, said after he heard the proceedings of the closed meeting that the testimony still was too incomplete to have much meaning. He said it could develop into something very significant. "So far," he said, "it's far from pieced together, it's like a jig-saw puzzle spread all over the table."

Senator Hendrickson said that the only significance he saw in the report so far was the record of Shimon's activities; and that he had seen nothing so far of national significance.

Senator Pepper said the subcommittee would decide later how much, if any, of the report will be made public; and if public hearings will be held.

He said the committee might also decide whether to ask the Justice Department to check into Lieutenant Shimon's income-tax returns. A recommendation that the Pepper committee call upon Shimon for copies of his late-year income-tax returns was expected to be made by van Arkel. But Pepper said this was not done in yesterday's meeting.

In fact, he said, the committee yesterday did not get all the way through the Police Department report.

Major Barrett told reporters that the report he delivered to Pepper was his own copy, and not the original that went to the Justice Department. Otherwise, Barrett said he would not discuss it. Van Arkel said the committee had not told the police to keep silent about the report, but that it was hoped they would be discreet.

Pepper told the press conference that the documents given to the committee by Barrett included statements of various officers, including questions to and answers by Shimon, a report by Captain Murray, a photostat of Shimon's record in the department.

Pepper said all the documents centered upon the activities of Shimon.

Pepper said the Police Department investigation of Shimon arose from the complaint of another officer in the department. The complaining officer was not Major Barrett, Pepper said. "I would rather not say who made the complaint," he added.

Pepper was asked why Shimon was transferred. "We haven't gone into that," he said, adding that Barrett had told the committee he had Shimon assigned to a precinct after the Police Department investigated the wire-tapping complaint last September.

Shimon had been an investigator for U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay. He was sent to the Fourteenth Precinct, and recently was transferred to the Second Precinct.

Senator Pepper volunteered the information that the Police Department report contained Shimon's admission he had been engaged in wire tapping over a period of years.

"That's the thing we're interested in," said Pepper. "We're interested in just how extensive the practice of wire tapping for private sources had been. We're trying to protect the public, if we can, against the unauthorized invasion of their privacy.

"No doubt, if we discover the participation by officers of the Police Department in wire tapping, especially for private sponsors, this committee would declare it opposes and condemns such a practice.

"We have not decided it has occurred."

Van Arkel at that point reminded Senator Pepper, and Pepper confirmed it, that Major Barrett and his aides had assured the committee that the Police Department does not engage in or approve wire tapping and does not use it for criminal cases.

Pepper added that Major Barrett stated any wire tapping done was without his knowledge.

Pepper declared that the invasion of privacy by wire tapping "certainly is inconsistent with the duties of a police officer, especially if it is done for private sources."

The Senator said the report referred to various sums of money. He said Shimon had been asked about a $1000 bill, and had made statements about it. Pepper would not disclose what they were.

Pepper added that there was a reference in the report to a $5000 payment, and to a figure of $20,000 as a payment for services in an investigation in which the question arose about wire tapping. Pepper said the report indicated that somebody made a suggestion that such a payment had been received by Shimon and that Shimon denied it.

"If we found evidence that sums of money had been received it would be appropriate to inquire into it," the Senator asserted.

Probable business for the Pepper committee today will be to finish going through the report, and to discuss future movies.

In a brief afternoon meeting, the wire tapping grand jury yesterday heard three witnesses, including an FBI agent, a woman Government employe, and another man, understood to be an official of a firm dealing in recording equipment.

Pact Partners' Readiness Held Unsatisfactory

By the United Press

American Delegate Charles Spofford said yesterday the military readiness of Atlantic Pact partners in Europe is "not satisfactory."

He said the Pact nations' council of deputies, of which he is chairman, has made a "good start" on plans for rearming western Europe. He declined to estimate how soon the needed improvements can be made.

Spofford flew home from London to report to Secretary of State Dean Acheson on his meeting with the 12 Pact partners.

He said representatives of the other nations understand the "urgency" of the situation and that the council should be a useful means of preparing for mutual defense.

131,087 Fewer on U. S. Payroll Than Year Ago

There were 1,968,940 persons on the Federal payroll when the fiscal year ended June 30, a drop of 131,087 from the previous June.

The figures, limited to civilian employes and excluding all military personnel, were reported to the Senate yesterday by Senator Harry F. Byrd, chairman of the Congressional Committee for Economy in Government.

House Is Virtually Unanimous In Backing Standby Controls

price-wage controls. But this action appeared to make little, if any, real difference because of other clauses still remaining, which give the President broad powers to make exceptions in any general application of controls, i.e., to set up selective controls in another fashion.

A third amendment, however, appeared to have knocked out an Administration "sleeper" in the bill. This one was proposed by Representative Walcott (R., Mich.) and carried 151 to 124. Administration leaders hope to reverse this action today on a roll-call vote.

The Wolcott amendment struck out a broad definition of "credit" in a section giving the Government power to control consumer and privately financed real estate construction credit. Wolcott said he wanted to be sure the provision covered only those two types of credit.

Representative Buchanan (D., Pa.), pleading for retention of the amendment, said its defeat would bring on a general inflation and would generally invalidate the credit control program. Pressed by reporters later on for just what other types of credit would be covered, Buchanan wouldn't give a specific example.

But he finally admitted the clause could cover commodity market speculators who buy on margin, a credit operation. House members generally were unaware of all this, however.

The original Truman request included powers for the Government to control commodity market speculation. The Senate Banking Committee struck this provision from the bill, however. The House Banking Committee, at a meeting yesterday morning, failed only by a 12-12 tie vote of doing the same thing. A strong lobby has been operating to knock out this often-requested, yet-to-be-granted power. Secretary of Agriculture Brannan has charged the speculators with helping to drive up food prices since the Korean war began.

Administration leaders claimed last night they have the vote to keep the antispeculation clause in the bill, but a combination of Republican and Southern Democratic votes is more likely to knock it out before today is over. Hence the Administration forces' concern over loss of the "sleeper" in the credit control section.

Yesterday's House action began with a voice-vote rejection of the pending McKinnon plan, which would have automatically brought on price-wage ceilings when the Labor Department's consumers' price index rose 5 percent above the June 15 level.

A vote of 125 to 86 defeated a proposal by Representative Cole (R., Kans.) to guarantee meat processors a ceiling high enough for a profit on each type of meat they handle—beef, lamb, pork and so on.

Two voice votes rejected attempts to add rent controls to the measure and a 148-to-87 vote knocked out an effort to write in a statement that Congress favors a 100 percent excess-profits tax.

The House did agree to limit the powers being granted the President to June 31, 1951, rather than to June 30, 1952, as the Senate committee proposes.

At one point House Majority Leader McCormack and Representative Brown (R., Ohio) tried to outshout each other on the subject of freedom of the press. This oratory followed a statement by Representative Celler (D., N. Y.) calling attention to the fact the House bill includes a provision exempting from price curbs newspapers, press associations and other publishers but not the wages these publishers may pay their employes. No action was taken.

The Senate is scheduled to begin debate on the same measure today but nobody would predict when final passage would come in that chamber.

Nehru Drops Hint He May Resign Over Bengal Issue

New Delhi, Aug. 9 (U.P.)—Premier Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru of India hinted today he might resign.

Nehru, replying to strong criticism of the working out of his pact with Pakistan Premier Liaquat Ali Khan on the minorities problem in east and west Bengal, revealed he also considered resigning last March.

"I don't know whether it is right for me to hold on to this office," Nehru told an All-India Congress party meeting today. "If I could serve my country better I would not hesitate to adopt a different course."

Congress leaders had criticized the Bengal pact in a two-day debate.

Yield Some Rights To Save Europe, Sforza Proposes

Strasbourg, Aug. 9 (U.P.)—Italian Foreign Minister Count Carlo Sforza today urged European countries to unite to save European civilization and freedom from mortal danger.

He appealed to the governments of Western Europe to abandon some of their national sovereign rights and to create a superior European entity as the only means to make war impossible.

Sforza said that a united Europe soon will become just as forceful as the United States but will remain attached to America for the defense of democracy and freedom.

The minister emphasized that American encouragement to European unification is certain proof that the United States is not pursuing any imperialist motives in Europe.

Veteran Center Has 50 Pct. Inquiry Rise

The District Veterans Service Center, 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw., has had a 50 percent increase in inquiries since the start of the Korean crisis, Col. Waldron E. Leonard, director, disclosed yesterday.

Most of these have centered on legal advice over payments on homes, furniture and other debts, and Leonard has therefore asked the Junior Bar Section of the District Bar Association to resume a wartime activity of advising servicemen.

The Veterans Administration recently announced it could not service requests for legal advice on rights accorded under the Soldiers and Sailors Relief Act and advised veterans to see a lawyer.

Colonel Leonard emphasized that in Washington his staff stands ready to give advice on the act and hopes through the Bar Association to also obtain a standby panel of attorneys who will help servicemen where legal action becomes necessary.

Yesterday a Reserve ordered to immediate service called to ask what to do about his home. He had been forced to buy one to "get a roof over his head," Leonard explained, and now was worried about holding on to it and protecting the small equity he had in it.

"A man like him needs the protection which Congress gave him. He'll make a poor soldier if he's worried about his wife being moved out on the street," Leonard declared.

Another man ordered to active duty not only had house troubles, he was tied up in installment buying. The Center advised him to notify all his creditors and to give the address of the Center to his worried wife, in case anybody tried to recover purchases during his time in the service.

The Gallup Poll

U. N. Without Russia Favored By 50 Pct. Now, Poll Finds

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J. Aug. 9.—The Communist invasion of South Korea has brought a sharp increase of public sentiment in favor of eliminating Russia from the United Nations.

Whereas sentiment in June before the Korean war was closely divided on the issue, today the weight of opinion is clearly in favor of the proposal made three months ago by former President Herbert Hoover.

He declared that the world must mobolize against "Red imperialism" and suggested that the United Nations be "reorganized without the Communist nations in it."

"It has been suggested that the United Nations should be reorganized, leaving out Russia and all Communist-dominated countries. Do you think the United Nations would be better able, or less able, to keep the peace of the world if it did this?"

Here is the vote as compared with the survey in June:

	June	Today's Survey
Better able	41%	50%
Less able	39	29
No difference	6	10
No opinion	14	11
	100%	100%

There is a considerable split of opinion between the well-educated and the less-educated on this issue. Persons with college training disagree with the Hoover proposal, the survey finds, although their opposition has greatly diminished since the earlier survey in June, when they were 2-to-1 against it.

Here is the vote today by education levels:

	College	High School	Grade School
Better able	37%	47%	55%
Less able	47	33	21
No difference	8	11	10
No opinion	8	9	14
	100%	100%	100%

Some U. N. observers feel that any question of expelling Russia would depend on whether, by supplying arms to North Korea, she is violating the United Nations Charter.

Article Six of the Charter says that any member "which has persistently violated the principles contained in the present Charter may be expelled from the organization by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council."

What some consider to be a precedent is the action taken by the old League of Nations in 1939. Russia was expelled from the League for attacking Finland.

On the other hand, observers who oppose the idea of remaking the U. N. without Russia believe that this would remove the last common meeting ground between East and West and make peaceful settlement of differences all the more difficult.

State Payrolls Up 5%

The 48 state governments have about 1,033,000 employes on their payrolls, an all-time high, the Census Bureau reports. The bureau said the number of state employes has grown 5 percent in the past year, and is now about half as large as the Federal payroll.

Keyserling Urges Hike In Production

Leon H. Keyserling, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, called last night for a huge production goal of 350 billion dollars a year by 1955, compared with the present 270-billion-dollar rate.

If we accomplish this, he said, "we will keep so far ahead of the Soviets that the folly of attempting to continue their aggressive actions may become apparent even to them."

Keyserling's remarks were made in a radio speech prepared for delivery here.

His theme was production, production, production in face of the Communist world threat.

He said the American people are unified concerning the fundamentals of the situation—the Communist intention to rule more and more of the world, the need of military resistance, and the need of more production.

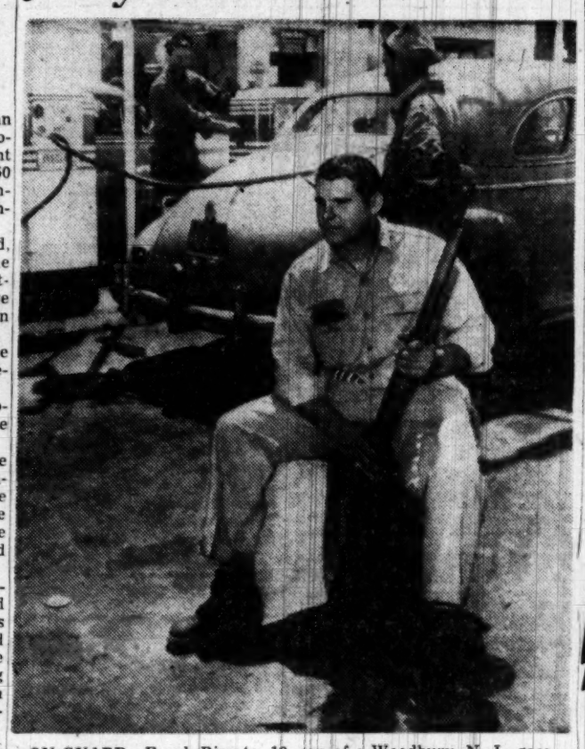
But he said there is one "deficiency" in public discussion and understanding. This deficiency is that we have talked and argued so much about controls that "we are in some danger of neglecting the even more important problem of production and more production."

He did not oppose controls, but he asked that they be viewed merely as means of getting more production.

The chief menace of inflation, for example, he said, is that it interferes with production, and "control of inflation, therefore, is an essential part of the battle of production."

He said the things President Truman has proposed — raising taxes, restricting credit, allocating scarce materials — are necessary, and "the more successful we are with these general measures, the less necessary it should be to resort to widespread control of individual prices, wages and production schedules."

Jersey Gas Price War Front



ON GUARD—Frank Rizzuto, 19, son of a Woodbury, N. J., gasoline station operator, sat on guard with a loaded gun after his father defied an attempt by New Jersey independent gas station operators to close all stations for a week because of a price war

Protest Closes Half of Jersey Gas Stations

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 9 (U.P.).—Independent gasoline dealers closed more than half of the State's 6000 filling stations today and tried to shut down hundreds more in the start of a threatened one-week protest against a price war.

Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll warned the aroused independent filling station operators against violence. State police were alerted as the shutdown spread across 10 counties and cut off regular gasoline supplies to some one million tourists.

Police in Jersey City, Trenton and Elizabeth and other large cities reported the closings virtually were 100 percent effective. The shutdown was reported 90 percent effective in most counties.

Control Bills Leave Way Open For Hikes in Most Foodstuffs

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Neither the House nor the Senate bill for price controls would bring any lower prices for foodstuffs than at present, even if they could be ordered into effect at once.

Both give President Truman standby authority to impose ceilings on prices when in his opinion they are necessary. But prices of nearly all food items, except meats, could go up materially before the provisions in either law would halt them. Both proposals set ceilings considerably above the prices now in effect for farm prices. Eggs could go up 50 percent and oranges almost 200 percent before the ceilings would become applicable.

The two formulas being considered for price ceilings are:

1. The Senate bill: The price on June 15, or the parity price, whichever is higher.

2. The House bill: The highest price on any day between May 24 and June 24, or parity, whichever is higher.

Nearly All Below Parity

Under either formula the ceiling price of virtually every product of the farm except meats, soybeans, cotton and wool would go up. Nearly all but those are now below parity.

One reason for this situation is that the parity price was recently raised by Congress. The base period for figuring parity was changed, effective last January 1. This change was contained in the Agricultural Act of 1949, sponsored by Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. M.) and Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.).

(Parity is a price for farm products that would give the same purchasing power to the farmer that he enjoyed during a base period.)

The Anderson Act provided that parity for "basic" commodities, wheat, cotton, corn, rice, peanuts and tobacco, should be based on the higher of:

1. Prices based on the average for 60 months, August 1909 to July 1914.

2. Prices based on the 120-month average January 1940-December 1949.

Parity prices on all other commodities were based on the average price for the 10 years 1940-1949, instead of 1909-14 as formerly.

Items Below Parity

As of July 15, wheat, for instance, was selling at 90 percent of parity. Under either the House or Senate proposal it could go up to 100 percent of parity—or about 11 percent. At present rice is only 88 percent of parity; corn 90 percent; peanuts 91 percent; potatoes 73 percent; butterfat, 90 percent; milk 87 percent; barley 78 percent; beans 82 percent; flaxseed 77 percent; oats 80 percent; rye 74 percent; sweet potatoes 88 percent; chickens, 80 percent; eggs 69 percent; lemons 65 percent, and oranges 34 percent.

Thus oranges could go up 200 percent before reaching the proposed ceiling, and such items as eggs 50 percent.

The items selling above parity, but which would not be reduced under either proposal, are cotton, which is bringing 107 percent of parity; wool, 111 percent of parity; soybeans, 110 percent; beef 141 percent; hogs 111 percent; lambs 129 percent, and veal calves 137 percent.

'Winslow Boy' at Olney

'Mirror' Play Done By a Literate Cast

By Sonia Stein

THE technical beauty of "The Winslow Boy" is that it's handled like a drama in a mirror—everything exciting happens off stage and is then reported on stage. And yet the play sustains its excitement from beginning to end.

This Terence Rattigan play, which is holding the audience glued to its seats this week at the Olney Theater, is based on a real case in English legal history which had its peaks of excitement in the House of Parliament and in court (as the motion picture version did), but here everything takes place in the living room of the Winslow home, where the characters in the case reflect the tensions outside.

The adroitness with which this is done—bits and pieces read from a newspaper, calls from the press and verbal reports made by counsel and members of the family to the housebound father—is a mark of Rattigan's aptitude.

Since he has history to fall back on for the plot, we'll skip the honors there, but it's a good enough plot. A little boy attending the British naval training school is accused of stealing and cashing a classmate's postal order. His father's determination to see the son's innocence proved, and his sister's determination to see the school shown up as a high-handed institution, form the main thread of the story.

The plot is slim going, dramatically, but for the cast at Olney it's tempting meat to sink fang into, because this is a highly literate cast.

Basil Rathbone, the chilly but meticulous lawyer who takes the case for the Winslows after testing in savage manner the boy's truthfulness, is an actor of consummate skill. He needs only flicker an eyelid to make his thoughts clear to an audience. Although he is not on stage very often in this play, Rathbone holds the stage entirely when he is there. Tall, slim, impeccable in a camel's hair coat with broad beaver collar and cuffs (and not one bit ludicrous in it), Rathbone has style in both the acting and the fashion sense.

The others are all capable. Colin Keith-Johnston is perhaps a shade kindlier than Rattigan meant the elder Winslow to be, and he banged his cane about more than necessary, but he too is an artist and good company for Rathbone.

June Dayton, who won a loyal following at Olney last year when she was a member of the resident company, is back as Catherine, the older sister who is willing to sacrifice marriage dowry and, ultimately, marriage, to see her brother's name cleared. There are undercurrents of romance between Catherine and the sneering Sir Robert Morton before this play is over, but since the real Archer-Shee case produced no such romance, it may be there is none here.

Miss Dayton is an understanding actress, slightly handicapped by not having the voice to respond to the direction she gives it.

William Whitman is a delightful young man. Playing the older brother who gives his father even odds that he won't finish Oxford, and finds himself deprived of the chance when little Ronnie's court costs take the family purse, Whitman is thoroughly likable. A rangy youngster with a good stance for the Bunny Hug, Whitman plays his comedy nicely, never treads on anybody else's lines.

David Cole, the handsome dark-eyed youngster who recently starred on Broadway in "The Innocents," seems at a loss here. In the early scenes for example, he plays the material line by line with no undercurrent of apprehension over his father's wrath as another young man played it at the National Theater in 1947. But he's a charming boy and he's not around much when acting's required.

In the face of current tendencies for some Governments to be high-handed in their dealings with people, there's a pertinency to the play although it is laid in the years just prior to the First World War. When the Crown decides it is time to "Let Right Be Done," it's a satisfaction to the Winslows and the audience alike. Hurray for our side, you might say.

SOOT ON THE SNOOT is all explained in "Peggy," a laugh-type Technicolor item coming into the Capitol Theater this morning with Diana Lynn (above), Charles Coburn and Charlotte Greenwood

It'll Draw Full Houses, However

Despite the Sinister Asides, '711 Ocean Dr.' Is Still a B

THERE is a document preceding the first scene of "711 Ocean Drive" which states that interference was thrown in the path of the producer of the picture by interests which preferred that the picture not be made.

And it may very likely be true.

There is a short moral lesson at the end, which states that when you plop $2 down on the ponies, you help to support the racketeers behind the bookies.

And that may very likely be true.

But the biggest moral of "711 Ocean Drive" is that a B picture is still a B picture no matter how attractive the sets.

Not that this will affect the business it draws. According to a Columbia Pictures Corporation ad in a trade journal, the picture is bringing in customers where customers have been conspicuously absent for the last several months.

And doubtless the Warner Theater, where the picture opens this morning, will be filled and overflowing like a box of buttered popcorn, with people who do plop $2 on the ponies and want to see whereinhell it goes, not to mention people who just want to see a movie.

The first batch will get a glimmer of an explanation. The second batch will get a good fast run through Boulder Dam's underground channels and little else.

Because "711 Ocean Drive" deals with the complicated telephone and radio communications used by the men who keep the bookies posted, it requires rather heavy explanations of what's what. There are times, early in the film, when it sounds like an educational film for use in the schools. Once over that hump, it tries to make a plot about a ring (of course!) of big racketeers from the East who try to muscle in (muscles encased in Brooks Brothers best or better) on a California racket operated by Edmond O'Brien, a good-hearted guy trying to amass a little cash in a semilegitimate (or stop short of murder) fashion.

This O'Brien guy happens to be a whiz at electronics, it keeps saying in the picture, because he used to work as a telephone repair man—a cause and effect I never figured on, myself.

The ring of racketeers, headed by Otto Kruger, who has decided to be the sauve gangster to end all suave gangsters and is simply sickening instead, plies O'Brien with a mighty handsome girl cylept Joanne Dru in the cast listing. One thing leads to another—like murder and wholesale thievery in Las Vegas, which O'Brien apparently never heard is considered burglar-proof because it can be roadblocked so effectively.

Crime, as ever, does not pay.

The picture seems longer than most, though in fact it is not particularly. Take the hint, unless of course you really want to know how these outfits operate. The Government happens to be rather concerned about it at the moment and there's no harm in your studying it the easy way. Cheaper than plopping $2 on the ponies.—S. S.

Threat to Gov. Warren Revealed

NYHT News Service

"Strong-arm men" for powerful gambling interests reportedly threatened the life of Governor Fuller Warren of Florida last winter, Senate crime investigators were told yesterday by C. V. Griffin, the governor's 1948 campaign manager.

Griffin testified furthermore that a Chicago and Florida race track operator and associate of Capone gang members contributes heavily to the campaign, apparently with a view of winning subsequent protection for certain gambling operations in Florida.

The race-track operator, William J. Johnston, then took the witness stand and denied that his contributions were made with this motive.

"I didn't expect anything," he said.

Johnston, head of the Sportsmen's Park race track, near Chicago, the Miami Beach Kennel Club and other tracks, said he had joined with Griffin, wealthy Florida citrus grower, and Louis E. Wolfson, Florida industrialist and real estate owner, because he was an old friend of Warren and thought he would make a good governor.

Griffin testified that Warren had suggested to him that Johnston be invited to help finance the campaign. Florida law prohibits race-track owners from making campaign contributions. Johnston, however, insisted yesterday that his contributions, which he placed at $100,000, not all of it his own money, were personal and, therefore, not illegal.

The testimony was given before the Senate Crime Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.). It was a continuation of the hearings the group held in Miami last month. At that time Johnston and partners of the S. & G. gambling syndicate in Miami Beach had been subpenaed to appear but did not, and they were heard today instead.

One important new element added to the picture yesterday was testimony that the S. & G., which ran the principal bookmaking operations on Miami Beach, had decided two weeks ago to dissolve.

The account about the alleged threats to Governor Warren's life was passed on to the committee by Griffin only as second-hand information—little more than gossip. Griffin said he had heard this report from several persons, whom he did not identify, last December. At the time, he said, the Governor was in a hospital suffering from a "nervous condition."

Soon after this time Governor Warren fired Griffin from a job he had given him as special investigator to look into Florida gambling and other matters. As far as the time element goes, there was a suggestion that the threats against the Governor's life by strong-arm men and the subsequent termination of the gambling investigation might possibly have had some relationship, but this was not explicitly brought out. Previously Griffin had testified that Johnston, a large campaign contributor, may have influenced Governor Warren to stop the investigation.

Among the chief witnesses today were Ben Cohen, attorney for S. & G., Leo Levitt, the cashier, and three of the six partners, Jules Levitt, brother of Leo, Edward Rosenbaum and Harold Salvey.

Altogether there are six partners in the syndicate, and the one in whom the committee has perhaps the greatest interest is Harry Russell, identified with Chicago's Capone gang. He is hiding out in fear or being murdered and will not testify. He suddenly became a partner in S. & G. last year. The committee is interested in reports that he was forced on the syndicate through political and other pressures and that through him the Capone gang "muscled in" on Miami Beach gambling.

The partners who testified yesterday denied this. They said they took him in because he threatened to take away some of their business in Miami Beach hotels owned by Chicago interests.

Bad Checks Bounce Woman Back in Jail

Baltimore, Aug. 9 (AP).—Mrs. Marguerite E. Hilliard, 40, of Greensboro, N. C., was sent back to jail today for writing some bad checks to cover her celebration when she was released last month after serving a previous sentence.

Mrs. Hilliard got out of the women's reformatory on July 13 after a six-month term for writing bad checks. A new 18-month term came after:

She moved into a downtown hotel, ran up a $114 bill and wrote a check to pay it. She transferred to another hotel, ran up a $110 bill and tendered another check. She was confronted with six more complaints from two department stores.

Happy Is The Day When Backache Goes Away . . . .

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Pincers Closing On Reds at Chinju attack Thursday morning to clean up the Communist bridgehead around Waegwan, 12 miles northwest of Taegu. The communique said the Reds had been surrounded.

Yongdok Falls to Reds

Only on the east coast of the U.N. beachhead was the turn of battle going against the defenders. The North Koreans recaptured Yongdok from the South Koreans and shoved almost one mile south of the shell-smashed town. Yongdok is 80 air miles north of Pusan.

Striking out to link up with the 35th, the Fifth Regimental Combat Team attacked at midnight Wednesday in the second major American night assault of the war.

Eight hours later, Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead reported from the front that the Fifth was within 4 miles of a link-up with the 35th. He said the North Koreans were falling back hurriedly to escape the trap Americans were trying to clamp shut.

Whitehead said the three-day American assault "broke the back of enemy resistance" 10 miles west of Masan, midway between Chinju and Pusan. Two regiments of the touted North Korean Sixth Division had been chewed to bits.

Allied fighter planes and light bombers added to the confusion in the Communist rear by pounding Chinju during the night and shooting up communications points and retreating Red columns.

24th Stuation 'romising'

Associated Press Correspondent O. H. P. King reported from the Naktong River front that Americans opened a new attack about dawn Thursday against the Red Changnyong area bridgehead.

In this action about 29 miles southwest of Taegu on the United States 24th Division front, King said, small numbers of Reds were being forced back across the river. The attack enabled American tanks to get into action.

The new attack, following up Wednesday's push on the bridgehead, was temporarily slowed by a Red counterattack. But King said the Americans fought it off and continued their squeeze on the east bank Communist pocket.

Brig. Gen. Pearson Menoher, deputy commander of the 24th, said the situation was "promising."

There were no late reports from the front along the Naktong farther north where the First Cavalry Division hammered at a Red bridgehead in the Waegwan area, 12 miles northwest of Teagu.

Documents Captured

Associated Press Correspondent Leif Erickson reported from Eighth Army headquarters that captured documents indicated the Communists had planned a major push across the Naktong.

First Cavalry units, he said, found battle orders—dated Wednesday—ordering the Reds to hold their bridgeheads "at all costs." The order said reinforcements were arriving and an effort to beach the American defenses would be made immediately.

The North Korean recapture of Yonkdok, 80 miles north of Pusan on the east coast, was reported at Eighth Army headquarters and also by Fifth Air Force pilots.

The town, flattened by naval bombardment, has changed hands several times.

General MacArthur's headquarters earlier had reported the Communists advancing on the northern rim of the 140-mile front.

MacArthur's headquarters said two South Korean divisions—the Sixth and Eighth—had fallen back two miles on the northern sector south of Andong. This is on the front about 30 miles north of Taegu.

Another North Korean force filtered south over rugged mountain goat trails toward Pohang, on the east coast about 75 miles north of Pusan. This spearhead, estimated about 5000 strong, knifed through an undefended gap in South Korean lines and was being slowed down only by difficult terrain.

As the tide began to turn in the Korean war, MacArthur's headquarters said doubt was spreading among Red sympathizers and converts that the North Korean army could drive the Americans off the peninsula.

Koreans partial to the Reds so long as they were advancing were reported "demoralized" by constant Allied bombing and the American southern offensive.

MacArthur's summary said progress was "satisfactory" in the south drive by Task Force Kean—headed by Maj. Gen. William B. Kean. It continued:

"Pilots reported that the Red forces were preparing to evacuate Chinju but violent opposition was encountered along the southern prong of the advance."

The Fifth Combat Team with fixed bayonets broke out of a bottleneck position west of Chindong and advanced three miles. Chindong is 25 miles east of Chinju. They continued their push Wednesday night.

North Koreans were surprised by the assault when they ran head-on into the bayonet charge.

Land mines cost the Americans one tank. Another was temporarily disabled. The land mines apparently had been laid by another American force which had fought over this area earlier.

Whitehead said the "entire atmosphere on the southern front was more optimistic with the break in the stalemate."

Second Division in Action

About 20 miles farther north, on the Naktong River front, United States Second Division infantrymen, in combat for the first time, helped veteran 24th Division troops wear down a Communist bridgehead on the east bank of the river.

The Reds were driven from commanding high ground positions, about six miles southwest of Changnyong, which is 23 miles southwest of Taegu.

About 100 North Koreans tried to fall back across the river, which bends in an S at this point. Red machinegun and mortar fire from the west bank of the river caught their own troops and mowed them down.

Planes Aid South Koreans

Two Communist battalions — perhaps 1600 men—supported by tanks were "eliminated" from one pocket at Nosok, two miles south of Paegwan by First Cavalry Division troopers, headquarters said.

The threat was so effectively eliminated that headquarters asserted "the North Koreans will be unable to reinforce their units during the night."

Just north of Waegwan, two battalions of North Koreans were driven back across the river front by a fierce attack by the South Korean First Division, supported by strong American airpower.

Correspondent Hal Boyle said enemy strongpoints were pinpointed by South Koreans who sent United States planes rocketing to the attack by waving white cloths and using smoke bombs.

Until air support came the South Koreans had contained the Reds with a thin line of infantry thrown around strategic heights overlooking the river front.

Still Try to Cross River

The enemy had been able to ferry at least two tanks across the stream at night to bolster his bridgehead. Air power knocked them out.

All along the Naktong, however, the Reds continued "sporadic" efforts to breach the river line, headquarters noted.

The South Korean withdrawal of two divisions along the northern sector was to new defensive positions. The Communists bore down in this sector with at least three divisions—perhaps 30,000 men.

The Far East Air Force reported Pyongyang had been scratched off its target list as the result of heavy B-29 strikes. An arsenal and railroad yards were 80 percent destroyed.

Fifth Air Force fighters and light bombers flew 347 sorties Wednesday. They bagged six tanks and eight vehicles and destroyed gun positions and two locomotives. Six other tanks were damaged, trucks, suppy dumps and installations smashed and heavily damaged in raids on Red rear area positions.

The Australians concentrated on the Waegwan area, firing rockets into concealed enemy tanks, and blasting troops with fragmentation bombs. Some of the Australians skimmed up a 3100-foot mountain to wipe out enemy trucks in a "ticklish" operation. One Aussie crash landed at an American airstrip when hit by flak, but escaped with a bruised leg.

The Marines came in at treetop level in close support of Marine infantrymen fighting on the southern front, hitting targets only 100 yards ahead of the ground forces. They flew over the area time and again, leaving only to return to their carriers to rearm.

Ground-control officers operating in jeeps or in tiny liaison craft hovering over the battlefield spotted the targets and directed the fliers to them.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said the stream of missions began Tuesday and continued Wednesday on an "almost uninterrupted schedule," with the B-26s concentrating on military targets at Taejon, Kunsan, Tasang

The light bombers stalked troop movements on the highways and railroads, bombing and strafing vehicles and railroads. They also hit bridges at Kumchon and Kwanggang and one pilot said he poured 1200 rounds of 50 caliber ammunition into a train at Nangen.

Lieut. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, commanding general of Far East Air Forces, said B-29 Superfortress raids on the North Korean capital of Pyongyang had been so successful that the marshalling yards and arsenal there were scratched from the "current list" of targets. The B-29s struck again Monday and on Tuesday hit rail and highway targets.

The Air Force disclosed that more B-29s had arrived from the United States.

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—Task Force 86, led by the battleship Missouri, returned to New York harbor today with 1329 Midshipmen from the Naval Academy and 19 colleges and universities from a summer training cruise.

Fifty cadets from the United States Military Ac demy at West Point made the cruise as guests of the Navy.

Limping U. S. Plane Safe at N. S. Field

Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—An American transport plane carrying 11 passengers and a crew of nine made a successful landing here today after limping home from a transatlantic flight with three engines out of action.

The four-engined C-47 Globemaster, operated by the Military Transport Service, landed at Dartmouth airport on one engine.

visor to the U. S. delegation. All other Council delegates were present except Malik, the president of the Council for August, and the Yugoslav delegate.

Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Britain presided over the informal session. After the meeting, a brief communique said that the meeting was held to consider difficulties as a result of recent sessions of the Security Council. This communique said that Malik had been asked if he would attend a closed session tomorrow with the other delegates to discuss the procedural wrangle and that he had agreed in principle to do so.

Arne Sunde of Norway called Malik from the British offices while the session was being held and obtained his tentative agreement to meet the others at Lake Success tomorrow.

Ales Bebler, deputy foreign minister of Communist Yugoslavia, was invited to attend today's meeting but declined the bid. A spokesman said Bebler's decision was in accordance with his country's policy on the Korean case. Yugoslavia voted against the majority verdict that the North Koreans are aggressors and proposed in June that the Council invite representatives of the North Koreans to explain their case.

5 Wartime Camps, 100,000 Capacity, Are Reactivated

Five wartime camps with a capacity of more than 100,000 trainees have been ordered reactivated, the Army announced yesterday.

They are Camps Rucker, Daleville, Ala., capacity 25,000; Stewart, Hinesville, Ga., 3800; Roberts, San Miguel, Calif., 26,000; McCoy, Sparta, Wis., 27,000, and Edwards, North Falmouth, Mass., 20,000.

The Army said these camps, all built during the World War II expansion, would be used to train nondivisional combat and service support units.

Reports of Gains in Korea Restore Optimism at Pentagon

Army spokesman at the afternoon Pentagon briefing recalled the swift thrust of Gen. George S. Patton's armored columns out of the Normandy beachhead. Such a movement could occur now, he said, and suggested the possibility that it could lead to an offensive all along the line.

Fears that U. N. troops in the Pusan perimeter might have become bottled up in a space too small for effective maneuver were answered by the same spokesman by comparing the present situation with that in Normandy six years ago. Then, he said, and proved it with a map, United States and British held six weeks after the invasion only one sixth as much land area as U. N. forces now hold in Korea. Into that small segment of northern France, he pointed out, at least 16 divisions and nine brigades were crowded as contrasted with five United States and four South Korean divisions now known to be in Korea with a few additional combat teams.

The slow retreat into the Pusan perimeter, he pointed out, has so shortened MacArthur's line that he now has troops in reserve to bolster threatened points.

Yesterday's optimistic note was sounded first at the morning briefing, when it was reported MacArthur was confident he would be able to hold Taegu, the South Korean temporary capital. From the over-all standpoint, MacArthur's headquarters was reported to have indicated "gradual improvement."

What remained still obscure were two important questions: Whether and to what extent the Reds might receive reinforcements of Chinese and Manchurian troops and whether Red air forces might be committed in strength. So far in the Korean affair, with Communist forces consistently successful, Red aircraft have appeared but rarely over the combat zone.

Whether the Communists would accept defeat in Korea without making use of their almost limitless trained, organized and equipped manpower is one of the imponderables in this curious sort of war. The North Koreans already have been reported recruiting their decimated divisions by conscripting South Koreans in the territory they have overrun. But that is a different mater from importing fresh organized divisions from outside Korea, many of them battle trained.

Should that occur, it appears that another logistical race would be set in motion, this time with conditions favoring the Allies. Time has been earned by the stubborn delaying action of the first United States units committed in Korea for building up a line of communications with the United States.

On the other hand, the number of Red troops which can be supplied is definitely limited by the extent and condition of the road and rail nets behind them and their vulnerability to air attack. Thus only the event will answer the pressing question of the Red's ability to move overwhelming numbers of fresh troops into Korea and to maintain them there.

Doughboy Killed When He Picks Up Rifle Booby Trap

Tokyo, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—The American drive from Masan has been harrassed by the first reported North Korean use of booby traps and their replanting of American mines, CBS Correspondent Robert P. Martin reported from the front today.

Martin said orders were issued for troops to be wary of what appears to be attractive booty after an infantryman picked up what he thought was a brand new rifle and it exploded, killing him.

Martin said the North Koreans also dug up an American antitank mine and reburied it in the path of the Americans. A newly arrived tank was disabled.

The big job ahead, said Young, is to coordinate all these individual reports into one plan and then to put it into effect. This is a job that requires an over-all director, Young said. The general said the Commissioners have not yet decided on a director, but he would announce the selection as soon as it is made.

5. Added powers. The Commissioners will need more powers to deal with emergencies. In case of disaster, the Commissioners would have to commandeer food and transportation facilities and restrict the movement and activities of the citizens. A bill to provide such powers, requested by the Senate District Committee, is now being drafted.

Both headquarters would be in direct contact with a military center that would give warnings of air raids, key civil defense agencies in the District, and key agencies in the Washington area. The headquarters would also have contact with "control centers" throughout the city that would function on neighborhood levels in giving alarms and advice. No estimate was given of the total number of persons who would be involved in civil defense work here. In the last war it reached 80,000, Young said.

Rubber-Neck Crowds

Hambletonian Like County Fair

By Red Smith

GOSHEN, N. Y., AUG. 9 (NYHT).—A fugitive from the floodlighted gambling hells of New York stood blinking in the sun in this green and sweltering valley.

It was, the guy said, as different from places like Roosevelt Raceway and Yonkers Raceway as—as—as the guy paused, groping for a comparison. As different as day from night. He said at last, straining inventiveness to the breaking point.

Red Smith

It was different, of course. Hambletonian Day always is different. And always the same. It was hot, as it always is in Goshen on Hambletonian Day. Although this time there was a breeze that softened the punishment and as the afternoon wore on and overcast dulled the shock of the sun.

Good Time track was all trigged out with its flowers and striped awnings and flags and tents, and the crowds strolled where they pleased—or at least where the congestion would permit—for there is an informality about a country harness track which doesn't exist in the big city plants.

The crowds wandered through the stable area, rubbering at the horses, and nobody told them to move on. Weathered Sam Caton, who raced trotters on frozen Russian rivers in the days of the Czars, was sitting on the paddock fence wearing his red and black silks. He was going to drive Benjamin E. Bampton's Mariner Hanover in the big race, and it was surprising to hear him say this would be his first Hambletonian for he must be somewhat older than Goshen itself.

"If my horse finishes sixth," he said, "I'll be satisfied," (sixth place, which is the last one eligible for a share of the purse, would be worth $2,211.15 and it costs $960 to start a horse in America's biggest trotting race).

"MARINER'S ONLY won twice in his life," Mr. Caton said, "But owners like to see their horses in a Hambletonian. We didn't enter this horse, weren't going to enter him, and it was two minutes to closing time yesterday when Mr. Bampton come around. How many horses in the race? he asked. Twelve, they told him.

"'Dammit,' he says, 'I like 13. Get the papers.' And he borrowed a pen and dropped the entry in the box and the box closed."

It was getting time for the first heat of the Hambletonian and a man came down to the announcer working the public address system and asked him to make an announcement about an onion carnival where an onion queen was to be crowned. "Can't do it," the announcer told him regretfully and with staggering irrelevance, "at a pari-mutuel track."

When they came down to the starting line behind the mobile gate, Lord Steward had his head in front but inside the first quarter mile he had tucked back to third as Del Miller drove Lusty Song to the front. Lusty Song was second choice at 8-to-5 and as he took the lead his chief rival dropped into second place. This was Star's Pride, which was held at 7-to-5 in an entry with Florican.

ONCE ON THE back stretch of the lopsided track and once as they turned for home, Star's Pride made a rush at the leader. But Miller, who'd been in the money in several Hambletonians, was going for his first victory, and he kept his colt straight coming down the rail, holding the favorite off by a length. Lord Steward was third. Since they reached the backstretch there had been no change in the positions of the leaders.

The city horse players swarmed down to the windows to collect their $5.40 refunds on Lusty Song. (The Hambletonian always is pictured as a sort of Back Country Derby, a bucolic amusement for low comedy hayseeds, but the crowds are strictly Broadway in shirt sleeves.)

So the horse players went back to the mutuel tickets and the horse went back to his barn, where handlers worked on him as a fighter is worked on between rounds. They tossed a cooling blanket over him and walked him and sponged him down. He stood there calmly, licking at the wet sponge when it came near his mouth, because they wouldn't give him water to drink.

By virtue of his victory in the first heat, he had a No. 1 post position in the second, so he led that parade. He looked trim and fit, as handsome as the $40,537.72 purse for the winner. Officially, he is described as a brown horse but from the stands he looked black.

He is the infant prodigy of the field, a veteran of 40 races at the age of 3 and the winner of 23, including one in which he set a world race record of 2:02 1/5 for 2-year-old trotters. He'd been the early winter book favorite for the Hambletonian but then Star's Pride knocked him off in three heats.

THIS TIME WHEN they went away there were two or three heads in front of Lusty Song's, but his position on the rail gave him an advantage and as they leaned into the first turn he was in front. Going to the backstretch, Lord Steward moved around him, but as soon as they were straight Miller sent Lusty Song to the front again. They were moving down the backstretch with Star's Pride lost somewhere in the pack until, on the big turn for home, Star's Pride flashed into view, rushing up on the outside.

Now the pair of them took aim on the wire, the drivers buggy-whips whistling. Star's Pride closed ground with a tearing rush. But it was still Lusty Song by a neck at the finish.

Practically everybody in Orange County, and certainly all the children, swarmed onto the track then. An exception was Roy Funderburk, who'd been fired as Lusty Song's trainer and driver about two weeks ago. He had driven the hopeless contender, Choice Hanover, to last place in the first heat and his mount had been scratched from the second.

Now rain broke suddenly, heavily. Everyone ran for cover, except those queued up at the cashiers windows. They stuck. Game to the last dime.

Joe Tipton's Single With Bases Full Beats Harris

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Aug. 9.—The Nats finally ended their string of scoreless innings at 24, but their losing streak stretched to four tonight as the Philadelphia Athletics beat them again, 7-6, in 11 innings.

A clean single to left by Joe Tipton with two outs in the eleventh scored Sam Chapman with the winning run. Victim was the Nats' fourth pitcher of the evening, Mickey Harris.

The cocky lefthander had come on the scene in the seventh after the Nats had blasted across six runs in that frame to take a 6-5 lead.

Eddie Joost sent the game into extra innings with his 14th homer of the season into the left field upper deck with one out in the eighth.

Chapman Triples

With one out in that fatal 11th, Sam Chapman swatted a triple into the centerfield corner and Harris walked Fain and Hitchcock to fill the bases.

The pressure eased somewhat when Mickey retired Kermit Wahl on an infield pop. But with the count two strikes and a ball on Tipton, the A's catcher smacked one on the nose into left and Chapman cakewalked over the plate.

Bob Hooper, who has made a specialty of beating the Nats, worked the last 4 1/3 innings, allowed only three hits and earned his eleventh victory. He has beaten Washington four times.

Chico Marrero was the Nats' starter, but he was no sensation. The last-place A's conked him for four runs in the first on two walks, a single by Paul Lehner, a long fly by Chapman, a triple by Hitchcock and a two-bagger by Wahl.

Marrero Chased

They knocked the Cuban out of the box in the third with their fifth run on singles by Chapman and Fain and a long fly by Hitchcock.

Shut out in their two previous games, the Nats went scoreless for six innings tonight, no thanks to a great peg by Paul Lehner in the second, cutting down Vernon, attempting to score from second on Dente's single.

But in the seventh, the Nats hit the jackpot. They put over six runs, knocked out A's starter Hank Wyse and took the lead.

The first two came on a single by Vernon and Cass Michaels' sixth homer into the left field upper stands. Singles by Dente, Grasso and a walk to Yost filled the bases and Gil Coan cleared 'em to tie it at 5-all on a pop fly double which Joost dropped after a long run.

Noren Extends Streak

Irv Noren greeted Hooper with a triple to right to break the tie. The blow extended Noren's hitting streak to 15 straight games.

Al Sima, who had replaced Marrero in the third, held the A's to two hits in the three-inning term and in the seventh, Elmer Singleton took over.

He walked the first two men he faced and that's when Harris was called in. After filling the bags with another walk, Harris got out of it unscathed by fanning Wahl and Tipton.

Mickey did okay until Joost's homer, Chapman's triple and Tipton's single.

HIGH MAN LOSES—And in this case it's Second Baseman Nelson Fox of the White Sox, who has to go way up in the air to haul down a throw from Catcher Gus Niarhos who was trying to nab Hoot Evers of Detroit, stealing second. Tigers won, 5-3.

30,000 See Challenger Back-Pedal Most of Way

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 9 (AP).—Sugar Ray Robinson, risking his welterweight title for a dollar, romped home an easy 15-round decision winner over back-pedalling Charlie Fusari tonight at Roosevelt Stadium. It probably was the last defense of his 147-pound crown because of the weight-making ordeal. Referee Paul Cavalier gave the Harlem Sugar Man every round but two, with one for Fusari and one even. It was just as lop-sided on the AP scorecard that called 15 for Robinson and one even.

Fighting for the Damon Runyon cancer fund, Robinson gave a brilliant exhibition of his masterful boxing skill against the blond challenger from Irvington, N. J., before a capacity 30,000 crowd.

Thousands were turned away. There were no knockdowns in the one-sided cat-and-mouse struggle and little violence.

Fusari Back Pedals

Alerted to Robinson's weight problem, that forced him to make three trips to the scales at the noon weigh-in before he hit 147 on the nose, Fusari rode his bicycle all night. The 6-to-1 underdog escaped the knockout that was predicted but that's about all he did. Fusari weighed 145¼.

Sugar Ray nullified Fusari's only weapon by feinting him out of position time after time before he could throw his vaunted right hand punch. When he did get a chance to let it go, he usually ran into a half dozen in return.

Long range head punches wobbled the Jersey milkman in the sixth, ninth and fourteenth. He slipped down, scurrying away from a right in the sixth, but bounced right back.

Sharp-shooting Robinson, always chasing a retreating foe, sliced open a cut over Fusari's left eye in the second. But excellent corner work by Trainer Ray Arcel closed it between rounds. Later in the eighth he brought blood from Charlie's nose with a stinging straight right.

Fusari wobbled like puppet man in the sixth. That was the round when Sugar Ray walked from his corner and threw a numbing right hand lead high to Fusari's head.

The challenger did a rubber-leg act in the ninth when nailed by a Robinson left hook. The Sugar man made him shake his head with a searing right to the body.

Robbie Finishes Strong

Robinson appeared to tire in the twelfth and thirteenth but cut loose again in the fourteenth. With the end in sight, Robby no longer worried about running out of gas. When Fusari tried to maul him at close range, he cut loose with both hands to the body and drove the Jersey lad through the ropes.

In the fiftenth Robinson slipped as he was about to throw a punch. He looked puzzled and went to a corner to rub his shoes in resin.

There was only one question all night. Would Robinson run out of gas? He didn't.

Ray Would Fight La Motta in Times Square

Jersey City, Aug. 9.—In the dressing room after tonight's fight, Ray Robinson offered to "fight Jake LaMotta in Times Square."

Raschi Whips Bosox, 2-1, on Three-Hitter

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—Vic Raschi pitched the New York Yankees to a 2-to-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox today, and for six and two-thirds breathless innings it looked as if he might achieve the first perfect game in the major leagues since 1922.

Billy Goodman's infield single finally broke the magic of the big Yankee's strong right arm. Then in the eighth Al Zarilla hit a homer to end any argument over the close decision on Goodman at first base.

As it was, Raschi retired 32 consecutive batters in his last two pitching performances, both superb ones. He set down the last 12 Cleveland Indians to face him August 4 when he won 1-0, and the first 20 Red Sox today. In both these games he allowed only three hits.

Raschi Fans 10

In winning his fourteenth victory before a crowd of 39,360, Raschi struck out 10. After last night's 7-4 Boston victory, Raschi pitched the Yankees right back into the thick of the American League race, three games behind leading Detroit.

The Yankees scored in the first inning when Gene Woodling, who had walked and stole second, came home on Hank Bauer's single. In the fifth, Billy Martin bunted safely, advanced to third on Raschi's sacrifice and Woodling's fly, and scored on Phil Rizzuto's bunt.

Stobbs Loses 5-Hitter

Chuck Stobbs pitched all the way for the Red Sox, giving up only five hits and striking out three in a performance not much less brilliant than Raschi's.

The hit that finally snapped Raschi's long string of throttled batters was a sizzling grounder that Rizzuto fielded spectacularly. However, Rizzuto was off balance and Goodman beat the throw to first.

Dom DiMaggio hit a single in the ninth for the third and last hit off the Yankee ace.

Fish Contests O. K. in Bill on Truman's Desk

The Senate passed a bill yesterday exempting nonprofit fishing contests from the antilottery provisions of the postal regulations.

The measure introduced by Representative Mack (R., Wash.), was sent to the President.

The Postmaster General ruled recently that publications could not be mailed if they contained advertisements of fishing contests in which prizes are awarded to the fishermen catching the first, largest or best fish.

Braves Snap Giant's Streak At Eight, 3-2

Boston, Aug. 9 (AP).—Two booming doubles by Bob Elliott brought an end today to the New York Giants' string of eight straight victories, giving victory to the Boston Braves, 3 to 2.

Elliott's two-bagger in the fourth, with two out, was followed by Sid Gordon's double to score the first Braves run. In the sixth with the Giants leading, 2-1, Elliott's second double scored Earl Torgeson, who had walked. Elliot advanced to third on a fly and scored the winning run on Tommy Holmes' high fly to Bobby Thompson.

Phils Bump Bums, 5-4, on Goliat's Fly

Brooklyn, Aug. 9 (AP).—Jim Konstanty made his fiftieth relief appearance of the year today as the onrushing Phillies swept the two-game series from Brooklyn, 5-4.

The victory, their fourteenth in the last 18, preserved the Phils' five-game lead.

Konstanty took over in the eighth after Mike Goliath's fly ball with the bases loaded scored Willie Jones from third with the tie-breaking run.

A walk to Jones, Granny Hamner's double and an intentional pass to Andy Seminick by Erv Palica loaded them up with one out in the eighth. Then Goliat flied to Gene Hermanski, driving home Jones.

Vic's Terrific 2-Run Drive Wins It, 5-3

Chicago, Aug. 9 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers retained their three-game edge on the American League field by defating the Chicago White Sox 5-3 today.

Vic Wertz, the second batter ever to drive a baseball into the center field bullpen in Comiskey Park, helped the first-placers to victory on his homer, his twenty-fourth. It followed an eighth-inning double by George Kell to supply Detroit's winning margin.

West Virginia Paper Rules Out 'Reds' for Cincy

Beckley, W. V., Aug. 9 (AP).—It's the "Redlegs" now for Cincinnati's National League baseball team instead of the "Reds," as far as the Beckley Post-Herald sports pages are concerned.

The paper's sports writers adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, the original name of the Cincinnati National League baseball club was 'Red Stockings' and, whereas, the common and always-used abbreviation of 'Reds' reminds one of the Communistic influences trying to crush out democracy in the world, be it resolved that henceforth the name of 'Reds' never be used again in the Post-herald sports pages. It'll be 'Redlegs.' Such is the unanimous decision of this paper's sports staff."

Lusty Song Captures Hambletonian in Straight Heats

For a Change

Georgia Has Switched to Georgians

Atlanta, Aug. 9 (AP).—Coach Wally Butts today offered to pit an All-Georgia University eleven against any football team in the South also using only home State talent.

But the first reaction, from Coach Bobby Dodd of Georgia Tech, was unfavorable.

Dodd said he wouldn't be willing to discriminate against the other Southerners on his Yellow Jacket squad by using only Georgia boys in such a game.

Also, he doubted that the Southeastern Conference commissioner would extend the playing season.

Butts declared recently he thought most of the troubles of recruiting prep stars could be cleared up by forcing colleges to use only football players from specific geographical areas, or, better still, from the home State.

Today he came up with the idea of Georgia playing any team in Dixie, both using only home State boys, as an experiment.

The University of Georgia coach suggested that the game be played for any Statewide charity. He said Georgia would pay its own expenses.

"I would prefer an early September date, but I will agree to play on September 16, even though that is the Saturday before we open against Maryland," he told the Atlanta Journal in an interview.

Butts' Bulldogs, loaded with Georgians, would find it easy going to field a first-rate team.

Miller Drives Colt in 2:02 Both Times

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 9 (U.P.)—Lusty Song, with the wheels of his sulky singing a song of speed behind him, smashed to straight heat victories in the twenty-fifth and richest running of the Hambletonian Stakes today.

The colt set a world record as a juvenile but this season he floundered along unimpressively but when the time came for him to seek the biggest race the sport of harness racing has to offer.

The colt, owned by E. J. Hayes of Duquoin, Ill., sped to triumph in the first two heats, the fifteenth horse in the history of the event to do so.

With Del Miller, who raced at the Maryland tracks, perched in the seat, Lusty Song sailed around the kite-shaped course twice in two minutes two seconds, beating out the favored Star's Pride both times. The margin was two lengths in the first heat and only a nose in the second.

Lusty Song's winning 2:02 times, incidentally, beat the 2:03 1/5 which stamped him the fastest 2-year-old last year.

That nose victory in the second heat was all Lusty Song needed to pick up the $40,537.72 of the $75,209.12 gross purse, the richest ever offered in the blue ribboned classic of harness racing at Good Time Park. The winner's share, however, was only the second richest. Guy McKinney who took the inaugural running at Syracuse, N. Y., in 1926, got $48,815.92 of the $74,451.32 gross.

Lusty Song was second choice in the betting for the first heat. The crowd of 16,942 stayed with the entry of Star's Pride and Florican, making them joint favorite at 7 to 5 against 17 to 10 on Lusty Song.

For a while it looked as though they had the right horse and victorious driver Miller agreed with them. "I watched Star's Pride all the way both times" he said, after the race. "But I didn't know I had him beat until I got under that wire the second time."

Miller wasted little time taking his horse to the front in both heats. Star's Pride never let him get far away the first time but didn't have the speed to stay with him in the drive to the wire. The second time, he made a stronger bid, charging at the pace making Lusty Song at a breakneck rate.

But Lusty Song, although all out to stay on top, had that little something which points out the champion and hung on gamely to bring home the bacon.

2d National Wins

The Second National Bank defeated Union Trust, 8-3, yesterday at the Polo Grounds to win the Bankers Softball League championship. Second National won all 10 of its starts.

Mrs. Lewis' Net 67 Wins Ladies Golf

Mrs. Adelaide Lewis shot 84-17—67 to win low net prize in Ladies' Day Golf yesterday at Prince Georges Country Club. Mrs. Burton Kintz had an 85 for low gross honors.

Second low net went to Mrs. Jack Smith with 86-11—75 and Mrs. Norman Brown's 98-22—76 won third low net.

D. C. Printers Romp Over New Yorkers

Chicago, Aug. 9 (AP).—Only Washington and St. Louis remained undefeated today after the third day's play in the Union Printers International Baseball League tournament.

Washington rolled over heretofore unbeaten New York in a slugfest today, 19-7. St. Louis won its third straight victory over Pittsburgh, 23-13.

Washington, the defending champion, and St. Louis will clash in one of the three games tomorrow.

The Washington sluggers hammered four New York pitchers for 13 hits. The New Yorkers got 9.

Gene Collins was Washington's starting pitcher. Charles Hines relieved him in the seventh inning with two out and the bases loaded. He held the New Yorkers to two hits the rest of the way.

Al Buschling, Washington first baseman, was the hitting star with two home runs which drove in six men. One of his circuit clouts came with the bases loaded. He hit safely five times in six trips to the plate.

In other contests Chicago defeated Baltimore, 12-0, and Boston downed Indianapolis, 12-7. St. Paul did not play.

Baltimore, Indianapolis and Pittsburgh were eliminated by their second defeats. Cincinnati and Detroit were eliminated yesterday.

The pairings tomorrow: St. Louis vs. Washington, Chicago vs. New York, and St. Paul vs. Boston.

Bobby Earns $2500 With Playoff Win

By Charles Chamberlain

Chicago, Aug. 9 (AP).—Bobby Locke defeated Lloyd Mangrum by four strokes, 69-73, in a playoff to win $2500 and the Tam O'Shanter All-American golf title. The triumph marked his first return to United States fairways in more than a year.

"I just can't say how nice it is to be back in the United States again," said the Johannesburg, South Africa, putting wizard as he tucked Promoter George S. May's check in his pocket.

Tam in 1948 when Locke was runner-up, accepted second money of $1750.

"It is certainly a pleasure to be doing business with an old established firm," cracked the likeable Mangrum. "That's a good hunk of cash for the kind of golf I played today."

12,000 Free Fans See Match

After the first four holes, Locke had scooted ahead by two strokes. Mangrum never came close to closing the gap as they toiled over the par 36—36—72, layout under a broiling sun.

A swarm of 12,000 persons, all admitted free to the course, romped after them. Some carried radios, to get baseball broadcasts and thus keep up on sports to the minute.

And in the unwieldy throng—which made the affair like Custer's last stand, were several new fathers hauling their offspring around in baby carriages. It was a poor man's show, and quite a picnic.

Locke went ahead on the second hole with a 12-foot birdie putt. He was over par for 5 on the fourth but Mangrum failed to capitalize and took 6 after shanking a iron shot.

Mangrum dropped a 6-foot birdie putt on the sixth and it looked as if he had finally shifted gears. But Locke then rattled in a tricky 5-footer to match the 3.

Locke Cases 20-Footer

On the seventh, Locke curled in a 20-footer for birdie 3 while Mangrum parred. They both took a 4 on the next, failing to drive the 250-yard green. Locke bagged a 10-foot birdie 4 putt on No. 9 for a neat 34 Lloyd exploded 2 feet from the pin from the sand, also for 4 and a 37 tally.

Mangrum's approach shots were inside Locke's on the tenth, eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth greens, but he failed to rap any of his putts in and he tied each time.

Locke sewed up victory on the fourteenth when Mangrum took a two-over 6. He sliced his drive out of bounds, eventually getting on the carpet in three. Then he three-putted.

This put Locke five strokes ahead. Mangrum got one back on the long fifteenth with a birdie 4 by reaching the green in two. They parred the last three holes in regulation fashion, Locke posting 35 and Lloyd a standard 36.

Rosedale Whips Taft, Evens Series

Rosedale, National League representatives, came from behind with five runs in the fifth inning to nose out the American League's Taft team, 6-4, and even up the 14-years-and-under playoffs in the Walter Johnson Memorial League championships at Griffith Stadium yesterday.

Billy Ellis, who pitched a six-hitter for the winners, banged out two hits in two trips to the plate, while his batterymate George Mulligan collected three for three and drove in three runs.

The 12-years-and-under playoffs were also knotted when Taft of the American Association scored eight runs in the last two innings to down Rosedale of the International League, 10-4.

Frank Leonarda, 0-11 loser in Tuesday's opener, came back to pitch a five-hitter as he went the route. Leftfielder Tommy Monahan put the winners in front with a three-run double in the fifth, then slashed a bases-loaded single in the sixth frame.

Midgets Take Title; Lanham Hurls 1-Hitter

Andrew Lanham pitched a one-hit, 8-0, victory over the Banneker Hornets to give the Parkside Midgets the 12-years-and-under championship in the Walter Johnson Memorial League playoffs at Griffith Stadium yesterday.

It was the second one-hit shutout thrown by a Parkside moundsman in two days. Harry Washington, second batter up for Banneker in the first inning, doubled to center for the only hit off Lanham.

In the under-14 division, the Police Boys Club No. 2 scored an 8-7 win over Langston to even up the best of three series at one game apiece. The final game will be played at the Banneker Playground, Georgia ave. and Howard pl., at 1 p. m. today.

George Brown went the distance for the Boys Club, allowing only 7 hits and striking out 11. With the winning runs on base in the last inning, Brown stopped Langston's rally by whiffing Paul Snipes on a 2-2 pitch.

Rickey Defends Griff on Double Admissions; Says More Fans Have Chance to See Games

BRANCH RICKEY told the United States Senate yesterday that baseball "should be permitted to operate on what it believes to be the best business basis."

"This is still a free country," the Brooklyn Dodgers' president said, and owners should be able to schedule games as they see fit, the Associated Press reported.

Rickey made his views known in a letter to Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.). The Senator had it insserted in yesterday's Congressional Record.

The veteran owner's comments were prompted by Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) who last week charged Washington President Clark Griffith with "war profiteering" when he scheduled day and night games on the same day and announced that separate admissions would be charged.

Although Griff scheduled the day-night encounters to satisfy the Detroit Tigers and New York Yanks, Langer said Griffith thinks:

IF OTHERS can do it—if Branch Rickey can get away with it in Brooklyn—I can get away with it in Washington."

In his letter Rickey said:

"I am not at all sure that the Brooklyn and Washington situations are analogous. Be that as it may I do feel very strongly that Mr. Griffith has every right to schedule the games as he has."

If baseball is to remain a wholesome, permanent sport, he said, it must be properly financed.

"It must pay its way. Even very great sportsmen have finally become wearied with continuous losses and all of us in it try to find and keep the ways and means of breaking even or indeed making a profit."

RICKEY said the practice of double admissions is nothing new. "Such a schedule is traditional in Boston, for example," he said, "and in my day as a player the custom of having morning and afternoon games on holidays was universal."

Rickey said the Brooklyn club has played 54 games on 27 holidays as morning and afternoon games in the past 47 years.

"It is our judgment," he said, "that by so scheduling these games we accommodate in a park of limited capacity almost twice as many people as we could were we to play the two games as an afternoon double-header."

He added: "It is common knowledge that on occasion we are unable to accommodate at Ebbets Field everyone wishing to attend single games."

Northeast Beats FBI, Takes Lead

Now Indians Claim Bosox Steal Signals

St. Louis, Aug. 9 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians have reason to think the Boston Red Sox steal visiting teams' signs at Fenway Park, says Cleveland Manager Lou Boudreau.

"We've had the feeling for a long time they were doing this," said Lou. "It's funny they score so many runs in their own park but bog down offensively on the road.

"Last time we were in Boston we saw a couple of boys with binoculars, seated in the bleaches. They had pencils and a pad and were marking things down after they looked through glasses."

Coach Al Simmons supported Boudreau with:

"Yeah, I saw 'em. They have the roped-off section in the Fenway Park bleachers just as we do at the stadium. These binocular guys were in the aisle right next to the vacant seats."

Thus the Indians manager revived the big binocular blow-up of 10 days ago in Cleveland. Manager Steve O'Neill of the Red Sox charged the Tribe had spyglass operators working from peepholes in the scoreboard at Cleveland Stadium.

Then somebody gave O'Neill a gift package containing a pair of toy binoculars between two telephone books. The angry Boston manager protested the "humiliation" to Will Harridge, American League president.

'Let Him Prove It', Steve O'Neill Says

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—Manager Steve O'Neill of the Boston Red Sox grinned and said "It's news to me" when told of Lou Boudreau's suspicion that the Sox were using binoculars to steal opposing teams' singles at Fenway Park.

"Okay," he said, "if that's what Lou thinks, let him prove it.

Davis Leaves GOP Race To McKeldin

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 8 (AP).—State Senator Roy Tasco Davis (R., Mont.) withdrew tonight from the race for the Republican nomination for governor.

This means that former mayor Theodore R. McKeldin of Baltimore, as the only other GOP candidate, will automatically get the nomination.

Davis made his announcement at a picnic of the Washington County Men's Republican Club near here. On Monday, he told the National Republican School of Politics in Silver Spring, Md., that he was in the race until he is "kicked out."

Yesterday, he said he was withdrawing for the sake of party harmony and a solid Republican front.

McKeldin, who was among those present, thanked Davis for his "very magnanimous action."

Davis, who lives at 104 W. Leland st., Chevy Chase, told some 300 persons at the picnic:

"I have found that both my worthy opponent and I have hundreds and thousands of friends throughout the State.

"We want our county tickets to win and we must elect majorities in both houses of the Legislature.

"After soul-searching consideration, I feel that the interests of the party are paramount to the ambition of any individual. In a sincere desire for unity, and with a deep interest in maintaining a two-party system that is effective, I feel that our candidate should be in a position to discourage factionalism.

"For these reasons, I feel that there should be only one candidate for Governor. Therefore, with malice toward none and charity to all, I proudly raise my head, which is neither bloody nor bowed, and in the spirit of harmony announce that I shall withdraw from the race for Governor."

Carr Delivers First Speech Against Sasscer

The Democratic Party is heading "rear first in the direction of the familiar state of confusion," Thomas Carr, Republican candidate for Congress from the Fifth Maryland District, said last night.

It was his first speaking appearance in his campaign for the seat now held by Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.). Carr addressed about 40 members of the Prince Georges County Young Republican Club at the Madison Cafeteria, Baltimore ave. and Madison sts., Hyattsville.

Carr criticized what he called Democratic Party "indecision" in international affairs, scored the failure of recent international conferences, and added: "Boat rides to Europe won't get us anywhere."

In his only reference to Sasscer, Carr called the Democratic incumbent "the dupe of the (Democratic) party." Carr said he will campaign against the Administration's domestic policy and its "failure to cope with the international situation."

Labor Board Rules Picketing to Force Hiring Is Illegal

The National Labor Relations Board ruled for the first time yesterday that picketing to force employers to hire only union members violates the Taft-Hartley Act.

The unanimous decision of the board was reached after the Supreme Court declared that even peaceful picketing "has aspects which are more than speech, and may therefore be restricted, at least where it is undertaken for an unlawful objective."

The ruling was made in two cases. One involved the AFL Building and Construction Trades Council of Denver and Henry Shore, a highway construction contractor of Littleton, Colo.

The other case involved Local 16 of the CIO longshoremen, headed by Harry Bridges, and the Juneau Spruce Corp., of Juneau, Alaska.

Handcuffed Boy Finally Freed by Key

The Washington Post

CRAIG KEEFER
. . . "heck of a fix"

A 5-year-old boy got 14-year-old Craig Keefer, 4630 12th st. ne., in some kind of trouble yesterday morning.

And it took seven policemen, a locksmith and a veteran of the last war to get him out.

Police found Keefer coming out of a bank at 12th and Newton sts. ne., with the handcuffs dangling from one wrist.

"I'm in a heck of a fix," he told Pvts. Verlia D. Sponaugle and Paul F. Little. "I got no keys."

He said he had been roughhousing with the neighborhood gang, when the five-year-old boy appeared on the scene carrying his father's souvenir handcuffs. In a melee on link snapped shut. The five-year-old could not find the keys. Then the boys suggested handcuffing Keefer to a picket fence.

But Keefer raced for his bicycle and escaped.

First the officers returned with Keefer to the scene and found the little boy. But neither he nor his mother could find the keys. They called the father. He was out to lunch.

Then the officers took Keefer to No. 12 Precinct Station. All the officers in the station tried their handcuff keys. No luck. Then they tried soaping Keefer's wrist. No soap. Then they tried paper clips, penholders, etc. No luck.

Finally, they took Keefer to a locksmith.

At this point the owner of the cuffs showed up, back from lunch. He had the key.

Sesqui Honors Maryland With Lane as Guest

Governor William Preston Lane, jr., and other Maryland notables were guests here last night as Maryland was honored as part of Washington's Sesquicentennial program.

Representing Maryland's Congressional delegation at the new Sesqui Amphitheater were Representative Edward T. Miller (R.), Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D.) and Representative J. Glenn Beall (R.).

Carter Barron, executive chairman of the Sesquicentennial Commission, presented a scroll to Governor Lane expressing the good will of the District to the people of Maryland.

Barron reminded the audience that Maryland was the first State to offer cash for development of the District 150 years ago.

Maryland's $72,000 contribution, he added, helped build Washington's two most famous structures, the White House and the Capitol.

Governor Lane, accompanied by his wife and daughter, drove to Washington from Annapolis. A District police escort met his car at the District line on Bladensburg rd. ne.

A welcoming committee of 16 officers of the Maryland State Society as well as officials of the Sesquecentennial Commission met the Governor at the amphitheater and escorted him to his special box. About 500 members of the Maryland State Society were present.

As a starter, the audience heard the men's and women's choirs of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad under the direction of Dr. James Allam Dash.

Then the curtain went up on another performance of "Faith of Our Fathers," Paul Green's pageant honoring George Washington.

Earlier, the Sesquicentennial Commission had announced receipt of the following message from President Truman, who witnessed the pageant's premiere:

"All of us enjoyed the show very much. I wish you would tell Paul Green I don't see how he accomplished so much in such a short time."

Alexandria Water Still Has Taste; Relief Is Promised

Alexandria residents still were plagued yesterday with an iodine-like taste in their water supply, but they had assurances from the Alexandria Water Co. that the nuisance would be abated shortly.

The unpalatable taste in the city's water resulted when Army employes dumped 15 barrels of waste disinfectant into a storm sewer near the Cameron Quartermaster Depot. This was a short distance from one of the water company's "feeder" streams.

Murder Ruled Out in Death Of Card Player

A murder charge against Reginald K. Huff, 30, in the card-game death of an Alexandria railroad brakeman was reduced to manslaughter in Alexandria Police Court yesterday.

Judge James R. Duncan ordered Huff held on $2500 bond on the lesser charge. Five witnesses testified Huff tried several times to avoid a fight in which John W. Oliver was fatally beaten July 29.

Huff made bond and was released immediately after the hearing.

According to testimony, the fight developed after Huff won a poker hand with a full house during the course of a game at 327 Hume ave., Alexandria.

Witnesses said he was accused by the dead man of cheating.

According to participants in the game, Huff then offered to let Oliver "take the pot." Oliver declined, but the argument continued, witnesses said.

In the fight that followed, Oliver was knocked across the kitchen three times and on each occasion "came back for more," the court was told.

Then, after other participants temporarily quelled the battle, Huff walked out of the kitchen and into the living room where he was followed by Oliver, the testimony showed.

Huff, a warehouse employe who lives at 2301 Cathedral ave. nw., said he drew a deuce as his fifth card in a game in which deuces were wild.

Oliver, who was 49 and lived at 1614 Suter st., Alexandria, died in an ambulance en route to Alexandria Hospital a few minutes after the fight.

Enemies of U. S. Hit by Truman On Life Values

President Truman said yesterday the forces confronting this country "have little or no regard for the value of human life." Addressing the sixth annual meeting of groups working to provide employment for the physically handicapped, the President declared:

"We are confronted by those who think of human lives only in terms of power. For them the individual is of no consequence. They think of the people only as an instrument for achieving their own lawless ambitions."

He spoke after signing a proclamation designating the week beginning October 1 for an appeal in behalf of employment for the physically handicapped.

Governor Okey Patteson of West Virginia, who lost both feet in a hunting accident, said his State had obtained employment for nearly 10,000 such workers in the past five years.

Platoon Returns Compliment When Surprised by Foe

With American Forces in Korea (Thursday) Aug. 10 (NYHT)—Quick action by an American lieutenant prevented a North Korean force from cutting off a battalion of the Fifth Regimental Combat team as it was advancing today in the American drive on Chinju.

The rear guard platoon of Lieut. Henry E. Emerson, Milford, Pa., rounded a sharp curve and was surprised to see a group of Red soldiers walking on the road ahead. The Reds had waited until the battalion's trucks passed, then emerged from cover and were setting up machineguns on steep slopes commanding the road.

Although he had only 30 men, Emerson staged an immediate attack that drove the Reds from their perch and back to a second ridge line. While Sergt. Robert L. Lyons, Cambridge, Md., fired tracer bullets at enemy positions, Lieutenant Emerson laid on mortar fire that dispersed the Reds before they could dig in. They fled, leaving 13 dead.

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Kluttz

Security Firings Bill Approved by Senate; Accused Can Appeal

The Senate yesterday passed a bill to give the heads of 11 agencies the right to fire any of their employes on security charges.

Its bill, however, would give accused employes the right of appeal to the Civil Service Commission, and those cleared by Civil Service could be restored to Federal jobs. A similar bill passed by the House doesn't provide the Civil Service appeal.

The appeal provision must be worked out by Senate-House conferees on the bill. The Administration is opposed to it.

The heads of these agencies would be given the broad firing power: Commerce, State, Army, Navy, Air Force, Defense Department, Treasury (for the Coast Guard only), Justice, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, Atomic Energy, and the National Security Resources Board.

The bill isn't intended to cover cases where loyalty is involved. It's aimed at those employes who get drunk and talk too much, who have questionable companions, etc. In general, those employes who can't be depended on to keep Government secrets secret.

The military agencies have been operating under a tougher security law since 1940.

POST OFFICE: The Senate passed over a bill by Senator Johnston (D., S. C.) to boost the salaries of postmasters, assistant postmasters, and postal supervisory employes. Senator Williams (R., Del.), argued that the bill should be sent back to the Post Office Committee and kept there until the postal deficit was erased.

PATENT OFFICE: The decentralization jitters has again seized employes of the Patent Office here. In an air of mystery, the employes yesterday were asked these two questions:

1. Do you own your own home here?

2. How many dependents do you have?

Employes immediately jumped to the conclusion that the survey of their personal status was a prelude to another attempt to move the agency out of this city. They remembered that similar questions were asked of them shortly before the agency was ordered moved to Richmond during the early days of World War II.

Agency officials said they are convinced that the information won't be used in connection with any transfer plan, but several of them said frankly that they didn't have the faintest notion why the data was being collected. One official said he looked for other agencies to send out similar questionnaires to their employes.

Since the Korean war, talk has been renewed of moving Federal agencies out of this Capital city and of dispersing Government employes and activities over a wider area.

CLOSING: The world-famous National Gallery of Art is planning to close on Mondays and Tuesdays—if Congress carries through on a tentative slash in its 1951 budget. The institution is now open seven days a week.

The Smithsonian Institution also would have to cut down on the hours it is open to the public if its budget, too, is cut. It probably would close on Mondays.

These and other non-defense agencies would have their budgets cut a minimum of 10 percent under riders voted by both the Senate and the House.

JOBS: The Army's Quartermaster General is hiring: supply specialists with three years of depot stock control experience, project planners, and tabulating machine supervisors. Salaries: $2875 to $5400. Call Liberty 5-6700, Ext. 71767 for details.

PERSONNEL PLAN: The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report yesterday came to the defense of the House bill to overhaul the Civil Service system. The measure would carry out several of the Hoover Commission's recommendations covering Federal personnel. It has been criticized by veterans and employe groups.

Dr. Robert L. Johnson, chairman of the Citizens Committee, charged that "the real purpose of those who offer objections to one or another of the provisions appears to be to sabotage the entire Hoover Commission personnel report."

'Long Snake' Bites Boy . . .

HE CAN PROVE IT—Dennis Roland, 5, of 5727 Chillum Heights dr., Hyattsville, Md., tells his father, Pvt. Thomas L. Roland of the accident investigation unit and Nurse Fay Sawyer at Sibley Hospital that "a great white snake that long" bit him in the swampy area back of his home yesterday. The boys with him said it was a snake and Denny had two fang marks in his finger to prove it. His daddy took him to Sibley where he was treated with snakebite serum

8 New Victims

Polio Total Here Rises To 129 Cases

Eight new polio cases were reported yesterday in Greater Washington, bringing the year's total to 129.

In Montgomery County, four cases were reported by the county health department. The county's total now is 17. Arlington County's tenth case was a 26-year-old man of the 2600 block of S. Nash st., who was admitted to Gallinger on Tuesday.

Prince Georges County, with a total thus far of 20, and Alexandria, with 4, reported no new cases yesterday.

Gen. Van Fleet Takes Over Second Army

Fort Meade, Md., Aug. 9 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. James A. Van Fleet became commanding general of the Second Army today, with administrative control of Army activities in a seven-State area.

An honor escort greeted him as he entered the post on the road from Laurel, Md., after a drive from Washington. The 75-mm cannon on two tanks boomed out a 15-gun salute as his sedan approached. The Second Army band broke into three ruffles and flourishes and the General's March.

After ceremonies at the gate, the new Army commander was escorted to his office and welcomed by members of the Second Army staff.

He succeeds Lieut. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, who retired last week after almost 39 years in the Army.

General Van Fleet recently returned from Greece, where he headed the U. S. Military Mission for more than two years. A 1915 graduate of West Point, he led the 4th Infantry Division when it spearheaded the assault at Utah Beach on D-Day.

New Principal Is Appointed In Arlington

Edward Rutter, 43, principal of the Caldwell (N. J.) Junior High School for the past five years, has been named principal of Arlington's Washington-Lee Senior High School, it was announced yesterday.

Rutter will receive $7000 a year in his new post, which he will take over August 28, according to school superintendent William A. Early.

He succeeds Claude M. Richmond, who leave Washington-Lee to become principal of the new Stratford Junior High School this year.

A native of Pottstown, Pa., Rutter received his B. A. in 1929 from Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster, Pa., and an M. A. in 1936 from Teachers' College, Columbia University.

School officials also announced appointment of Dr. Harold M. Wilson to the newly created post of associate principal at Washington-Lee. Wilson has been teaching in George Washington University's education department for the past three years. He lives at 2717 S. Wayne st., Arlington.

Montgomery Land Accepted By Red Cross

The Montgomery County Chapter, American Red Cross, accepted yesterday the offer of a site for the county-wide headquarters from Sam Eig, real estate developer.

The board of directors of the county chapter met yesterday in Bethesda and voted to accept the offer with thanks for Eig's public-spiritedness.

Plans for the building will be developed in the future as well as plans for financing the construction. The chapter has for many years wanted a county headquarters building with space enough for its various activities.

The 25,000 square feet section given by Eig is on East-West hwy. where Western ave. extended will meet the highway at the apex of the District of Columbia.

The location is half-way between the main branches of the chapter, Bethesda-Chevy Chase on one side and Silver Spring-Takoma Park on the other, and offers a centrally located and easily accessible headquarters for the entire county.

Mrs. Benjamin Resigns To Run for State Seat

Mrs. Georgia Benjamin, first vice president of the League of Women Voters of Prince Georges County, has submitted her resignation in order to campaign for a seat in the Maryland House of Delegates, Mrs. Reuben Bagdanoff, president, announced yesterday.

Mrs. Benjamin, who lives in College Heights, filed in the Democratic primary for one of six Prince Georges seats in the legislative body.

Mishaps Continue to Thwart Mother Seeking Citizenship

Don't ever try to tell Mrs. Mary Scaldaferri, 66, that it is easy to become an American citizen.

She tried for the fifth time to achieve naturalization, but once again a minor tragedy befell her before she could reach District Court to take the oath. Mrs. Scaldaferri, a native of Italy and mother of seven adult children, tried to be sworn in during November and December, 1949, January and February of this year and she tried again on Tuesday.

Once, according to District Court reports, she was stricken with appendicitis. Another time, she slipped on the wet pavement outside her 501 Decatur st. nw. home and suffered a leg and back injury.

On her most recent attempt, she got her arm caught in a bus door, Judge Burnita Shelton Matthews was told. The judge continued the case to give Mrs. Scaldaferri another chance.

When a reporter called to ask her whether she will try again she hung up the phone with just one remark. It was:

"I don't want to be bothered by you."

Twenty-seven persons were naturalized, among them Freda Utley, the author and lecturer who as a witness on Capitol Hill once branded Owen Lattimore a "menace."

She was born in London 52 years ago and was married to one Arcadi Berdichevsky in Russia, according to court papers. He is now presumed dead, according to the documents.

She was granted her pen name of Freda Utley at the naturalization. She said that she has sought citizenship here for 10 years but was hindered by her membership in the Communist Party some 20 years ago. She has since become anti-Communist.

Injunction Against Wells Lengthened

Court Extends Ban On Official Activity By Falls Church's New City Manager

The expiration date of a temporary injunction restraining Falls Church City Manager Harry Wells from doing his job was pushed up from August 15 to September 8 yesterday.

Fairfax County Circuit Court Judge Arthur Sinclair shoved the injunction deadline forward because the court docket is filled until September 8, with no time available for arguments on a permanent injunction.

At the same time, Judge Sinclair—acting at the request of Falls Church authorities—set a $2000 bond on the five complainants who requested the injunction. The bond is to cover any financial loss the city might suffer from the temporary restraining order if the court should deny a permanent injunction September 8.

The injunction was issued last Friday at the request of Falls Church Councilman Samuel E. McCrary and four other city residents, all backers of Acting City Manager Roy F. Dunn, who was ousted from the job in a bitter council meeting last week.

Wells was appointed city manager at the meeting. Mayor Albert M. Orme said the action was necessary so that $700,000 worth of city school bonds could be signed by a bona fide manager, not one in an acting capacity.

The Falls Church School Board last night requested City Council authorization to borrow $25,000 on a temporary basis in case funds from the $700,000 bond issue are not forthcoming within the next 10 days.

City Attorney LaRue Van Meter yesterday repeated that the school bonds "are not in jeopardy" because of the restraining order on Wells.

He pointed out that the August 15 date "is not a deadline" for delivery of the bonds to buyers. In fact, he said, the bond buyers "are working it out with us" on the delivery date.

And City School Supt. Irvin Schmitt hinted yesterday that city officials may disclose another plan at Monday's meeting to get the bonds signed before the September 8 injunction hearing. Neither he nor Van Meter would reveal further details.

Hearing Set On Rate Hike For Pepco

A public hearing on Potomac Electric Power Co.'s request for a 9.5 percent rate increase will be held August 21 at 10 a. m. in the board room of the District Building, the District Public Utilities Commission announced yesterday.

Pepco officials said the requested increase would boost monthly electricity bills of average District residential consumers 15 cents from $3.50 to $3.65 for 142 kilowatt hours.

However, Pepco proposes to increase by 70.7 percent, or $661,000, the annual bill Capital Transit Co. pays for power to operate its streetcars. CTC has said such an increase would make necessary an increase in bus and streetcar fares.

Pepco also has filed with rate-setting bodies in Maryland and Virginia for permission to increase rates to its customers in Washington suburbs. It estimated the increases in the three jurisdictions would add $3.5 millions to operating revenue in the next year.

Window Cleaning Firm Fined in Safety Violation

The United States Window Cleaning Co., 622 E st. nw., was fined $25 yesterday in Municipal Court for permitting a window washer to operate without a safety belt.

A District safety engineer said he saw, on May 31, one of the company employes without a belt on a narrow ledge washing windows on the second story of a building. The company protested that it provided its employes with belts but that the employe neglected to wear one.

D. C. Officials Plot War on Dutch Elm Disease As Two of City's Oldest Trees Are Cut Down

The Washington Post

DISEASED ELM FELLED—Victim of Dutch elm disease, an 80-foot, century-old elm is cut down in Lincoln Park along East Capitol st. Yesterday District government and parks officials were determining the best way to control the increasing tree disease rate

Alarmed by the rapid rise in the Dutch elm disease here, District government and National Captial Parks officials conferred yesterday on control measures.

Meeting with Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, the group agreed to single out an area in the Northwest section for a test run of present techniques and to determine what further measures and facilities are necessary. Detailed plans will be made at a further conference in the District Building this morning.

Even as the group met, workmen of the parks agency were cutting down two of Washington's oldest elms—each more than a century old and 80 feet high—which had fallen victim to the disease. The trees were in Lincoln Park along East Capitol st.

Present at yesterday's session were officials of the District trees and parking division, the District Highway Department, the Agriculture Department and National Capital Parks, Lieut. Col. Carlin H. Whitesell, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, said.

Throughout the city—on private and public grounds—the cases reported ran from 1 in 1947 to 18 in 1948 and 35 in 1949, he said. This year 38 already have been reported.

In the test area, the District will concentrate on three techniques:

1. Spotting of weakened elms susceptible to the disease or already infested with Dutch elm fungus carrying beetles.

2. Felling of diseased trees and immediate removal.

3. Spraying of all elms in the area.

Trees were also being removed from the District by man, rather than nature. On Rhode Island ave. ne., across from Brentwood Village, an old English purple beech was cut down Tuesday night to make way for an apartment development. A National Arboretum official, asked why the agency didn't transplant the tree, said it would take 50 tons of earth and a million dollars to move it successfully.

District Highway Director John N. Robertson disclosed that 11 trees within Logan Circle are scheduled to be removed to make way for a 13th st. lane through the circle. The 11, include seven horse chesnuts, two gingkos, one gum and one maple.

Another 85 trees—59 horse chesnuts and 26 maples—have been removed along 13th st. from the Circle to U st. where the arterial street is being widened from 30 to 44 feet. These were listed as almost ready for removal because of disease anyway, Robertson said.

2 Boys Hurt By CTC Bus, Milk Truck

Two children were hurt when they were struck by heavy vehicles in the District yesterday.

Robert Byrd, 6, of 618 Kenilworth ter. ne., may have suffered a fractured skull when he ran into the path of a Capital Transit bus at 6:34 p. m. at Kenilworth ave. and Foote st. ne. The driver, police said, was Jonas J. Umholtz, 24, of 3110 W st. se.

Michael Kamrad, 4, of 220 Hamilton st. nw., suffered abrasions and a possible fracture of the left leg at 12:15 p. m. when he jumped to the doorway of a milk truck as it pulled away from in front of his house.

He lost his balance, fell to the street and the right rear wheel passed over his leg. His condition at Children's Hospital was reported "not serious." Driver of the truck, according to police, was George H. Roland, jr., 28, of 1631 R st. se.

Mother, Son Uninjured As Car Overturns Twice

Mrs. Mary Williams, 37, and her son, David, 4, escaped injury when their car overturned twice following an accident on Shirley hwy. at about noon yesterday.

Police said Mrs. Williams, of 3230 Valley dr., Alexandria, was driving west on Shirley hwy., near the Pentagon rd. network, when her right rear fender was struck by a car driven by Robert N. Juntwaist, 34, of 2734 S. Uhle st., Arlington.

Juntwaist was charged with reckless driving and hit and run. He was released in $1000 bond pending a hearing September 6.

Man Freed Of Gaming Case Charge

Charges of setting up a gaming table and permitting gaming against Wallace Beach, 32, of 1321 M st. nw., were dismissed yesterday by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Beach was one of 16 men arrested July 22 when the vice squad, led by Lieut. Roy Blick, raided a house at 610 F st. sw. and found a dice game in progress. Police seized $3900 in the raid.

All but Beach were charged with disorderly conduct and allowed to forfeit $25 collateral each. Police contended, however, that Beach was operator of the game and booked him on gambling charges.

Charles E. Ford, Beach's attorney, argued before Lawrence that Beach should be released because police had not shown he was the occupant of the raided premises and had not shown he was running the game.

Highly Developed

Agent's Nose For Alcohol Holds 2 Men

A highly developed sense of smell brooks no argument.

The legality of the arrest of two men on charges of violating the alcohol tax laws was challenged yesterday by their attorney before U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

"Did you have a warrant?" Attorney Charles E. Ford asked Francis J. Sweeney, agent of the Treasury Department's Alcohol Tax Unit.

Sweeney conceded he had not had a warrant.

"Well," thundered Ford, "how did you know this was alcohol? Don't you know it's illegal to arrest people without a warrant?"

"I smelled alcohol," declared Sweeney positively. "I've been in this business for 17 years and I've developed a keen sense of smell—especially for alcohol."

Commissioner Lawrence ordered the men, John P. Johnson, 37, of 48½ Hanover st. nw., and George Pringle, 37, of 1738½ 6th st. nw., held in $1000 bond each for action of the grand jury.

At the hearing, Sweeney testified that he and other agents trailed Johnson and Pringle on August 1 to an alley in the 1400 block of 22d st. ne. where they caught them unloading a truck filled with 100 gallons of 180-proof alcohol and 127 gallons of "moonshine" whisky.

Senate Passes Accounting, Weapons Bills

The Senate yesterday approved and sent to the House a bill calling for systematic destruction by the Metropolitan Police of weapons seized during law enforcement.

Also approved by the Senate and forwarded to the House was a bill to make District Government accounting practices the same as those used by the Federal Government. It would shift from the disbursing officer to the auditor the responsibility for illegal or wrongful payment of funds.

Two other District measures were blocked by Senators' objections during consideration of the unanimous-consent calendar. One called for Federal acquisition of the Old Stone House in Georgetown as a historic monument; the other provided for Federal review of proposed changes in historic Georgetown buildings.

The weapons bill, introduced last year by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath when he was chairman of the Senate District Committee, was prepared by District officials. In recommending approval of the bill, a report by Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) said the legislation would provide for an orderly procedure for disposing of pistols and other weapons seized by police

"In the past, the property clerk of the Metropolitan Police Department was authorized to dispose of such weapons only where the defendant had been convicted of a crime of violence," the report said.

Johnston's report said the bill would protect the right of lawful owners of weapons to recover them from the police.

Chrondropoulos Must Return To Greece Despite His Plea

Domaftheme D. Chrondropoulos, 35, may soon go back to Greece, never knowing what American justice is all about.

Chrondropoulos, looking handsome and polished, was in District Court yesterday where Judge Burnita S. Matthews was to decide whether he is insane and should be committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital.

"May I say something, your honor?" he said, but the judge replied he would have to wait his turn.

The lawyers then went into a huddle at the bench, leaving Chrondropoulos alone down below.

"But your honor, I can't speak English, and I want to defend myself," he insisted.

The judge said he would get his turn.

A psychiatrist was then called to the stand. He said that two months ago, the Commission on Mental Health found Chrondropoulos to be insane but that he has since improved.

"He can handle his affairs with some prudence, but the chances of recovery would be better if he were not in the American environment," said the psychiatrist.

The Government then moved to dismiss the proceeding, saying that Chrondropoulos would soon be deported because his visa had expired.

Again the Greek rose, this time to say that he was a student here with none to defend him. He had complained to police that some fellow countrymen sought to kill him and had slandered him by calling him homosexual. Police found the complaints groundless.

"I think that American justice ought to protect me," he said. "I have a right to be heard, I think. How can I go back to Greece to my wife and child when my name has not been cleared?"

Judge Matthews dismissed the proceeding on the motion of the Government.

She told Chrondropoulos that she could not hear him out, since there was nothing before her to hear.

The lawyers all agreed it was for the best. If Chrondropoulos had been adjudged insane, he would have been shipped back to his homeland anyway. This way, at least he did not have an adjudication of insanity against him.

Chrondropoulos smoothed back his wavy black hair and walked out of the courtroom. A deportation official was on hand to take him away.

U. S. Reduces Payment to District by $1.2 Million

Joint Committee Says War Emergency Is Responsible for Severe Fund Slash

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

A Senate-House conference group yesterday cut by $1.2 millions—to $10.8 millions—the payment the Federal Government will make to the District this year.

The Federal payment had been 12 million dollars each year since 1947 when that amount was authorized by the District Revenue Act.

Yesterday's action was regarded as final. The District item is part of the 34-billion-dollar omnibus appropriation bill whch the full House and Senate must approve or reject as reported out by the conferees. It is not expected the bill will be held up further over the relatively tiny payment to the District.

What will the cut mean to the District?

Nothing This Year

It won't mean anything this year, said Acting District Budget Offcer William G. Wilding. Even with the cut the District expects to end fiscal 1951 next June 30 with a 6.8-million-dollar surplus. But the pinch will be felt in fiscal 1952. Wilding explained it this way:

The city has built up a surplus for new schools and other needed construction held up by the war. Money to start much of this work was included in the District's 1951 appropriation bill approved last month. But more money will be needed next year to finish the work started now. The city was counting on the surplus to provide it.

It's too early to say specifically where the pinch will be felt, Wilding said.

Tax-Free Land

He noted that the Federal Government, by ownership, has removed 40 percent of District land from tax rolls.

The cut was applied entirely to the general fund. The one million dollar payment to the water fund—to pay for water used by the Federal Government—was maintained. The highway fund—used to build and maintain streets and bridges—has never received any of the Federal payment.

Members of the conference group indicated they were motivated by the war situation and the 10-million-dollar surplus with which the District finished fiscal 1950.

There were indications from some of the conferees that the cut would not have been made in normal times. Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), leader in the fight several years ago to set the Federal payment at 12 million dollars, said the conferees agreed to report that the cut should not be regarded as a precedent or a permanent policy.

$16 Million Urged

Representative Lowell Stockman (R., Oreg.) said he felt the payment should be closer to 16 million dollars to compensate the District properly for Federal land holdings here. He said he voted for the cut yesterday because he felt it was a war emergency matter.

The conference group consisted of the Appropriations subcommittees from both House and Senate that originally acted on the District money bill. At that time—before fighting started in Korea—the House group had opposed the $1.2 million reduction made by the full House.

Yesterday's conference was attended by Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee, and Representative John Taber (R., N.Y.), a leader in the move to reduce the Federal payment.

Fairfax Sewage Plant Site to Be Restudied

The Fairfax County supervisors yesterday agreed to consider relocation of the site of a proposed $1,100,000 sewage-disposal plant to be built with funds voted in a referendum last August.

The board withheld "final ratification" of a 15-acre site selected by county sanitation officials after hearing vigorous protests by spokesmen from several adjacent subdivisions.

The objectors, who came from the New Alexandria, Bellehaven, and Marlin Forest areas, protested location of the plant in a proposed site along the Potomac River just south of the Belleview Apartments project. They contended that construction of the plant would industrialize an area that now is occupied by select residential developments.

Among those who spoke in opposition to the plant were Warren Granger of New Alexandria, Harrie White, jr. of Wellington, Lester Simpson of Marlin Forest and Tyrrell Krum of Vienna, who is the Republican nominee for the Eighth District congressional seat in the November general election.

Krum said that despite the fact he did not live in the area affected, he felt the situation offered the supervisors a "dramatic opportunity" to prove that each member of the board is concerned with the general welfare of the county rather than with that of his own district.

James J. Corbalis, county sanitary engineer, said the proposed plan was set up after nearly two years of study. Because of the typography of the site, Corbalis contended, the plant would not be visible from nearby residential developments or highways.

Members of the board agreed they would inspect the proposed site and several alternative sites suggested by opponents of the presently planned site before making a final decision.

At yesterday's meeting, the board also named Guy N. Church, a retired Army colonel of Falls Church, as head of the county's Offic of Civilian Defense. Plans for a civilian defense program will be worked up later at a series of conferences between Falls Church and county officials.

700 Youngsters

Nellie Custis Pupils to Be On Half-Days

About 700 students at Arlington County's Nellie Custis Elementary School will be on half-day sessions for a four- to six-week period this fall, Arlington School Supt. William A. Early said yesterday.

The part-time sessions—for the first through six grades—will be necessary until the new Oakridge Elementary School (the "new Hume School") is completed between October 1 and 15, Early said.

At that time, the Custis population will be more than halved as students are transferred to the new school.

All other county elementary youngsters, except for about 60 children at the Stewart School, are expected to be on full-time sessions this fall, Early said.

The part-time classes at Stewart probably will be needed for first and second graders until the new McKinley School is completed in January, Early said. Some students will be shifted then.

Arlington expects a record total school enrollment of 16,000 children this year, with primary grades bearing the heaviest portion of the increase over last year's 14,200 children.

Until two years ago, all county first and second graders were on half-day shifts. Last fall, the half-day sessions were eliminated in about half the elemntary schools, with 1000 children still on a part-time day.

This fall in Arlington, 2200 pupils in the Washington-Lee Senior High School, and about 1000 youngsters scheduled to attend the new Stratford Junior High School, will be on part-time shifts at Washington-Lee until the scheduled completion of Stratford on November 15.

King Refuses To Apologize To Dr. Davies

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King refused yesterday to apologize to the Rev. Dr. A. Powell Davies, minister of the All Souls Unitarian Church.

"Apologize for what?" asked King. "I have said nothing wrong."

The next step is apparently up to Dr. Davies, who is on vacation, or to his lawyer, Wendell Berge, who could not be reached for immediate comment.

The controversy between King and Dr. Davies arose early in the week when King asked for a sample of Dr. Davies' handwriting along with those of all other defense witnesses in a morals case against Robert S. Williams, jr., 45, a trustee of All Souls Church.

The request was made in a heated exchange between King and Paul Connolly, Williams' lawyer during a Municipal Court proceeding. Connolly sought and received a 30-day stay on a new trial motion. Williams had been convicted of indecently exposing himself last April to two teen-age girls near American University. He has not been sentenced yet.

Connolly suggested that King be more cooperative and King turned the request back to Connolly, when he asked for the handwriting samples.

King said that both sides were anxious to determine authorship of two mysterious letters sent King after Williams conviction. The letter writer, who did not sign his name, said that he committed the offense.

Maid Sees Dummy in Chair, Hospitalized in Flight of Fright

The Washington Post

HURRIED EXIT—The shattered plate glass in the front door of the Carl Beauty Salon marks Carrie Bain's path after she found a huddled figure in a booth when she reported for work yesterday. It proved to be a practical joker's dummy

Carrie Bain, 23, is not one to argue with still, silent figures.

When she came upon such a figure yesterday morning in a booth at the Carl Beauty Salon, 607 12th st. nw., she did not stop for small conversation.

It was a practical joke that misfired. Someone at the beauty salon had stuffed a beautician's uniform with pillows and towels, topped it off with a wig and left the figure in the booth of one of the operators as a joke.

Carrie, who is employed as a maid at the salon and lives at 1212 U st. nw., reported for work at 7:45 a.m. A note had been left in her locker to warn her about the dummy setup. She didn't see the note.

Now Is the Time . . .

SPICY and delectable are brandied peaches and the time for making them is now. You'll be happy you did when next winter comes and you're serving a company dinner.

BRANDIED PEACHES

4 pounds peaches — Cloves — 3½ cups water — 1 egg white
4 pounds sugar — 1 pint white brandy

Pare the peaches. Insert two cloves in each whole peach. Make a syrup of the sugar and water. Add the egg white, beaten to a froth. Skim. Add fruit, one layer at a time and boil 5 minutes. Pack in sterilized glass jars. Boil the syrup about 10 minutes more or until thickened. Remove from heat, add brandy and pour over fruit. Seal at once. This makes about 5 pints.

5 Million Federated Clubwomen Pledged to Combat Hoarding

THE full strength of all the millions of housewives who are members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs has been thrown behind the "No-hoarding movement" at the express appeal of Mrs. Hiram Cole Houghton, president of the Federation.

These homemaking women, living in large cities, in towns, villages and on farms in every State in the Union, have been asked to put forth constructive effort in their own communities to protest hoarding as unpatriotic, dangerous to our economic structure, and inimical to the best interests of the clubwomen themselves as consumers.

Mrs. Houghton has emphasized to the membership that they have it in their hands to prevent spiralling prices, inflation and the black market by buying only what is necessary. She has also urged the members to support the Government in its plan to cut non-essential expenditures in order to provide the millions needed for the military departments. "Construction of civil works, dams, postoffices, etc., can wait until we have our men properly armed and equipped" Mrs. Houghton said at GFWC Headquarters today.

Panic Buying Aids Communists

Finally she reminded clubwomen that as the largest organization of home-makers in the United States they must be particularly aware that panic buying is of definite advantage to the Communists who would welcome any sign of an economic crisis in this country at this time. In closing her appeal Mrs. Houghton asked the five million women to constitute a solid line of home and consumer defense from Maine to California, and from Florida to Alaska.

"We offer the help of five million women" she said, "who will say out loud in their own market places that hoarding is not in any sense smart—and it is not what we expect of mature American women at this critical hour."

Bedtime Exercise OK for Children

Recent research on children's sleep shows that physical exercise taken about an hour before going to bed does not interfere with sleep. According to a Good Housekeeping study, the most important interference to sleep comes from emotional disturbance. Warm or cold baths just before retiring were found to have no constant effect, but drinking six ounces of warm milk at bedtime proved helpful.

Southern Girl Who Desperately Loves Yankee GI Would Elope If He Would Propose; He Knows Life, Dances Divinely, But Her Mother Frowns on Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 19 and have had one year in college. My mother and I have always been very close and she has always given me everything I wanted, even though we haven't much money. But of recent months we can't get along, because she disapproves of the man I desperately love.

We live in a small college town in the deep South, and Bill came here as a GI student. He is 23, has seen much of life, dances divinely and has a beautiful voice. Mother says he hasn't a good background, disapproves of him because he is a Yankee, and also because his religion is different from ours. But as he doesn't go to church anyway, I don't think his religion matters; and as he is sweet and nice to me I'm not bothered about his background either. After all, I am not marrying his family.

I also go with a home town boy who loves me, and does anything I say, and takes me all the nice places. He has a fine family and a very good future waiting for him after college, and of course, mother is all for him, which makes me dislike him. At least, I can't think of him as more than a friend.

Mama Can't See Girl's Grown Up

BILL HAS told me he loves me, but hasn't talked of getting serious. He has been gone two months and I didn't hear from him until the other day. He said he missed me so much and could hardly wait to get back here. I love him so much that I will marry him when he returns, if he asks me—even though it means a break with my family and giving up the big church wedding I've always wanted. It would kill me to hurt my mother, but I would give up everything for Bill.

Most of my girl friends are having similar trouble with their parents. Why do parents always disapprove the boys we love? Haven't I the right to choose whom I want? Mother just doesn't want to admit that I have grown up. Please write something to make her understand,—and answer soon. I am so unhappy here at home, even though my parents do everything for me. V. V.

Girl Is Babyish in Many Respects

DEAR V. V.: Judging by the gist of your lament, your mother is amply justified in thinking you are a baby in many respects, lacking common sense and social savvy suited to your years. But this regrettable condition is largely due to her assiduous interference with what should be your independent growth of character.

She makes a big mistake in doing everything for you, giving you anything you want, etc. No wonder you aren't happy at home. The overly protected, extravagantly coddled child is just as disconsolate and dissatisfied with his environment as the sorely neglected urchin.

In the family constellation, your psychological self is confined to a wheel chair or go-cart. At least, that's how your parents treat you. But potentially you are strong enough to stand on your own feet and fend for yourself with increasing prowess, provided you got adequate opportunity to learn from experience and reliable example how to make your way successfully.

She Pursues a Poor Risk

FIGURATIVELY speaking we might say the woman in you is eager to be born, eager to burst out of the cocoon of childhood in which your parents preserve you—but they unconsciously resist the possibility. They prefer to deliver you, just as you are, into marriage to a man of their choice, when they think the time is right. That is their idea of encompassing you in safekeeping; it is their anxious expression of love for you. So there you have my version of the battle now going on between you and your mother.

Now, about Bill—from all you say, he is probably the worst risk you could fix your heart on. He talks of love but not of marriage, leaves you in suspense for months without a word or line, is irreligious, comes of a different social background, etc., none of which is in his favor, so far as you are concerned. I think you are fascinated by him largely because (1) he seems so splendidly free of maternal leading strings, and (2) because he is a cagey courtier. If he were as tamely devoted as the home town lad, I dare say you'd soon feel fed up with him, too.

It is my hunch that you'd find yourself out of a gilded cage at home, into a whirlpool of trouble with Bill, if you should elope with him. A sheltered girl your age, in your stymied but striving emotional ferment, occasionally leaps into marriage as a supposed escape to freedom, and in almost every case of the kind, the "love" is shortlived and the outcome sad and humiliating. So my advice is to "be still," as the Bible says, and develop growth of understanding. M. H.

Child Isn't a Possession, Parents Must Never Forget

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

BOTH fathers and mothers may be guilty of treating a child as if it were their possession. They forget that while their responsibility is to be protective and to give the child love and guidance, that children are entitled to their rights as individuals. They are not bound to the parents as if they were slaves.

Here is a father who refuses his child any freedom to make or keep friends. "My husband is dogmatic and possessive," writes Mrs. E. P. "My child, nearly 5, has no playmates because my husband chases them out of the yard. No one suits him. The boys are no good as companions, he says, and the girls are too old.

"He refuses to let our child share any of her toys with playmates and so the children ostracize her. Then he tells her they do not like her.

"He is so possessive that the child thinks she must ask permission even if she leaves the yard with me. When I talk to him he gets very angry and says I am not a good mother. The girl is well-developed for her age, and obviously well-fed and cared for. What shall I do?"

I would try to interest your husband in some authoritative books on child care. He might accept their advice when he wouldn't take yours.

He should know that children learn to get along with other children by the experiences they get in play. It is cruel of him to give the child the idea that she isn't liked. Every human being needs the strength and happiness he gets from knowing that he is liked and your child could become ingrown and queer if she felt that she were repudiated as an individual. No father has a right to do this to his child.

It is very probable that he himself is not a socially inclined person. He may have few men friends and be a yes-man in business, so that he has to express himself at home by being a tyrant who makes everyone step around to his bidding.

He should be made to understand that his rights as a father do not reach the limits he has assumed, of depriving the child of the companionship of children her own age, of both sexes, and of making her a toy for his amusement or dominance.

It is lucky for the child that she is of nearly school age when she will be thrust into the company of children and be certain, even without his permission, to get some play experiences with them.

Magic Lemon Pie Makes Itself, Just About; You Don't Have to Cook the Filling

DEAR ANNE:
Have you a recipe for lemon pie made with condensed milk? As I understand it, this does not require any cooking.
P. L., Alexandria, Va.

MAGIC LEMON PIE

1 crumb or baked pastry shell, 8-in. across
1 1/3 cups (15 ounce can) sweetened condensed milk
1/2 cup lemon juice
2 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind or 1/4 teaspoon lemon extract
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar, if desired
4 tablespoons sugar

Put sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice, lemon rind or extract, and egg yolks into mixing bowl. Stir until mixture thickens. Pour into chilled crumb crust or cooled pastry shell.

Add cream of tartar to egg whites. Beat until almost stiff enough to hold a peak. Add sugar gradually, beating until stiff and glossy but not dry. Pile lightly on pie filling. Bake in a slow oven (325 degrees) until lightly browned (about 15 minutes.) Cool. This makes one 8-inch pie.

DEAR ANNE:
Will you kindly let me know if there are any stores in Washington that sell second-hand clothes for high school children.
I have four children in high school and three smaller ones. Our crops did not bring much money this year; therefore I would be very grateful for any information you can give to help me get the clothes they need for school.
M. T., Waldorf, Md.

There are several shops in this vicinity that sell second-hand clothes for youngsters—clothes in good condition with plenty of wear left in them.

One in the District is located at 2001 Massachusetts ave., nw. (telephone Columbia 0005.) Another, in Alexandria, Va., is at 113 South Royal st. (telephone Alexandria 0649.) Still another, at 4715 Hampden lane, Bethesda, Md., is closed temporarily. Call Wisconsin 9843 to check whether its' open when you get ready to visit it.

DEAR ANNE:
I have an electric refrigerator about one year old. Have been having trouble with food in it acquiring a disagreeable taste in spite of the fact that the box is kept spotless and food wrapped in wax paper or put away in covered containers. Will you please tell me what can be done to remedy this situation?
A. B., Washington.

Do you use baking soda or borax in the water with which you wash the refrigerator? Either will help keep the box sweet and clean. Use 1 tablespoon of the soda or borax to 1 pint cool water.

A piece of charcoal—sometimes sold in a small can for this purpose—can also be kept in the refrigerator to absorb odors and keep them from being transferred from one food to the other.

If you continue having trouble after taking these measures, call a repair man and see if there is anything wrong with the operation of the refrigerator.

Reserve Officers' Ladies Organize

ROALs Ready to Guard the Home Front

By Nicha Soure

"I FELL in love with both." Of course, Mrs. Howard G. Hill fell in love with her husband first. But when she came to America as a British war bride, she fell in love with the country, too.

The dimunitive ("I'm 5-foot and nothing") former opera star is now tackling the biggest assignment of her life. As the acting president of the Reserve Officers Association Ladies Club, she is working day and night to build up the club that has American security at heart.

The ROALs will hold their first meeting on Wednesday at the home of Gen. and Mrs. A. E. Evans at 6336 31st pl. nw. These wives, mothers and sisters of officers in the Reserve are going to band together to lay the groundwork of the local organization.

They will follow the lead of the men in the family and support the program of the men's organization, the Reserve Officers Association. But their job will be a little bigger.

When the Reserve Officers Association held its annual convention in Washington in June, members were advocating the VIP. The Volunteer Instructee Plan is a noncoercive alternate for Universal Military Training.

MRS. HOWARD G. HILL
. . . acting ROALC president

Crisis Made Them Shift Viewpoint

THE peacetime plan proposed to instruct youths from 17 to 21 in military training at summer camps. Today, with the Korean crisis taking precedence, the Reserve Officers and their feminine counterparts are putting their weight behind Universal Military Training.

With the men, the ROALs will stress Americanism and national security through military preparedness. But they also will educate the emotions and reasoning powers of the women to allow men in their families to take part in national defense if needed.

In Mrs. Hill's words, "We shut our windows at night and bolt the doors against burglars. But our country has been left wide open. We should 'bolt' the United States through military preparedness."

"We have a wonderful country here," she continued, "but we are much too complacent considering the danger lurking around the corner. We think it can't happen here," she murmured thoughtfully, "but it can if we're not prepared."

She remembers the daily bombings over England when the people sat—"what else could we do?"—and watched, only equipped with searchlights. "What good are searchlights without planes to fight back?" she asked.

Older Officers Merit Attention

OF the man who inspired her interest in the ROALC, Mrs. Hill says proudly that General Patton personally decorated Colonel Hill in Italy with the Legion of Merit. Today in civilian life he is a railroad consulting engineer, having surveyed railway problems recently in Japan and in Mexico some years back.

Mrs. Hill believes that the older reserve officers would be of invaluable help if recalled to active service as instructors. Their knowledge and experience would be to benefit to their country now and their age would be no handicap.

She pondered over the word "age" as she spoke. "Look at MacArthur," she said finally. "Age is no drawback there."

Bringing the issue down to personalities, Mrs. Hill was asked how she would feel if her husband entered active service.

"It would break my heart," she said quickly with feminine concern. "But if his country needed him and could use his knowledge, I would do everything in my power to help him to serve, as he is more than anxious to do."

It was a chance meeting in England back in 1944 that brought Mrs. Hill to America.

Married by Proxy, Then in Person

"CAN I help you?" she asked the American officer who walked into the bookstore where she was working. They were married by proxy in August, 1945 while Colonel Hill was in the United States and she in England. She came to this country in November and they were married again, both parties present this time, soon after.

"You'll sing for the President of the United States before you have been in this country one year," Mrs. Hill's husband predicted. Already one of her fans, her husband had heard her sing in the hospitals and Army centers in England during the war.

Maria de la Hull, as she is known professionally, did not sing for the President. But when she had only seven days to go to complete her first year in America, she sang for the President's wife. The First Lady was in the audience when Mrs. Hill was the leading lady in "New Moon" at the Lisner Auditorium.

That "New Moon" production proved to be another milestone in Mrs. Hill's life. Her last lines in the show were "I am a citizen of the New World." By a bit of luck, she received her citizenship papers two weeks earlier than scheduled and so was able to pronounce her last lines truthfully and with feeling.

Women Must Guard The Home Front

THE blue-eyed brunette has still more ideas about the ROALC. She believes that when the men are off to war, the women should take care of the home front. First item on the list is fighting subversives.

You can bet your bottom dollar there won't be any subversives in the ROALs! "I can smell them out in no time," she declared, adding that she can draw upon her experiences while in Europe to spot these un-Americans.

Although only wives, sisters and mothers of men in the Reserves will be given voting privileges to the ROALC, any woman will be allowed to attend the meetings. To bring women up to date in world events and to give them a better understanding, high Government and military officials will be invited to address the group.

Serving with Mrs. Hill as officers of the club until the group can hold an election are Mrs. Francis J. Burk as secretary and treasurer and Mrs. Victor Gondos, Dean of Women at American University, as the club's parliamentarian.

Maintains a Wide Variety of Interests

THE enthusiastic supporter of ROALC has a variety of interests. Besides her singing, (she will sing Friday night with the Army Band at the Capitol steps) she is partial to gardening and interior decorating.

Of her home she says, "It's not modern or traditional. It's a conglomeration of everything but somehow it fits." Even though the ceiling of her living room looked as "big as an ocean" when she started painting it, she has managed to paint her home twice during her five years here.

Colonel Hill is completely in favor of his wife's interest in the ROALC, and the whole Reserve Officers Organization is elated at the support it is receiving from the distaff side.

Doll Business Booms in Egypt For Wife of U. S. Air Attache

Cairo, Egypt (AP).—Mary Lib Peddie always liked to play with dolls when she was a girl back in Oklahoma City. When her husband had only a few months remaining as assistant United States Air Attache to Egypt, she decided to make some dolls modeled on Egyptian types so the folks back home could see what life in Egypt had been like.

She did—and now orders for her dolls are pouring in from India, Spain, England, the United States, France, Germany and the Middle East, Egyptian newspapers are forgetting their anti-American tone to praise the American woman who models Egyptian life as it really is. To her surprise, Mrs. Peddie finds:

Oklahoma girl makes good with doll-making in Egypt.

"I've got a business on my hands. And I'm going home in the fall. Orders keep pouring in so fast we can't keep up with them—what am I going to do?

"And I still haven't had time to make the dolls for the School Museum in Oklahoma City, which is why I started the whole thing."

The dolls are perfect minatures of Egyptian types, down to the most minute details. The women's veils even bear different decorations to show what district they are from. Men are clad in the long galabia robe, red leather shoes and sashes. On the baby dolls there is the traditional string of blue beads to ward off evil spirits.

"That's the result of careful research in Egypt's Agricultural Museum," says Mrs. Peddie, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O.K. Weizel, of 1201 Huntington st., Oklahoma City. Her husband is Lieut. Col. Joseph Scott Peddie, war time air hero who flew 87 missions in North Africa and Europe. He also is from Oklahoma City.

"Everything about the dolls is Egyptian," Mrs. Peddie explained. "The bodies are stuffed with Egyptian cotton and made of Egyptian cloth. Only the hair, made out of dyed nylon, doesn't come from here."

Heads are cast from plaster in molds carefully sculptured to show Egyptian types. It takes an hour to stuff each body and from two to four hours to dress each doll. Her mother-in-law, Mrs. Jessica Welte of Oklahoma City, and Mrs. Helen Kaltbrenner of Louisville, Ky., help Mrs. Peddie now that business is, booming.

Doll collectors are the big buyers. Word-of-mouth has spread the dolls' fame from country to country. The snowball started rolling when a few friends saw Mrs. Peddie's first dolls.

Mrs. Peddie, who also runs a home and takes care of her two children, has another project underway, too: she's translating a collection of American recipes into Arabic.

Loans of Area Reserve Banks Rise 77% in '50

Loans made by the 477 Federal Reserve member banks in the Fifth District increased more than 77 percent and reached a level of $1,731,000,000, setting an all-time record, in the first six months of this year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reports.

This figure was 13.4 percent higher than that of the same period in 1949.

The Fifth Federal Reserve District includes Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina and the District of Columbia.

Bank loans constitute an important key to business conditions, and in this instance reflect the notable upward trend in the district throughout 1950.

To secure funds for the expansion of loans the banks sold 111 million dollars worth of United State Government securities. Other security holdings increased by five million dollars to a total of 294 million dollars—a level nearly 10 per cent higher than that of a year ago.

Reserves, cash and bank balances declined by 104 million dollars (7.2 percent) during the six-month period, compared with a decline of 8 percent during the same period in 1949.

In contrast with the rapid increase of loans, total assets of the member banks showed a decline of 1.5 percent. The drop in the first six months of 1949 was 3.6 percent. Total assets at the end of June this year stood at $5,940,000,000, 3.5 percent higher than on June 30, 1949.

Total deposits in the member of $5,479,000,000 as of June 30 this year reflected a seasonal decline of 1.6 percent, but remained 3.5 percent above the mid-1949 level.

NEW AREA UNIT: A group of 18 distributors of children's apparel have organized the Retail Children's Apparel Association of Greater Washington. The purposes of the association are to eliminate trade abuses, to develop ethical standards and to give the public the benefit of their experience. EARNINGS: Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp. of Tulsa, Okla., yesterday reported net income of $5,980,478 for the six months ended June 30, equal to $3.22 a common share. This compares with net of $6,376,719, or $3.43 a share, in 1949. Net for the June quarter was $3,451,455, or $1.86 a share, against $3,018,888, or $1.62 a share, a year earlier. New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—The cotton futures market gained further ground today under general buying which again reflected short 1950 cotton crop prospects as well as indications of a tightening in raw cotton supplies for the 1950-1951 season. At the close quotations were up $1.15 to $1.85 a bale.

While demand was heavy and the market at no time during the session showed any weakness, it was called upon to absorb a fairly substantial amount of profit taking and hedging. Prices during Tuesday's and today's sessions for some contracts had advanced more than $6 a bale.

Of considerable interest to the trade today was official tabulation on the amount of cotton that changed hands on Tuesday. This showed that the volume of trading on the New York exchange at 555,100 bales was the heaviest for a single session since February, 1949.

Maryland 4-H Honors Dairy Judging Team

Members of the Maryland 4-H dairy judging team, who recently returned from competing in international contests in England, were honored at luncheon yesterday in connection with Maryland 4-H Club Week at the University of Maryland.

The youths who competed in the Royal Dairy Show at Oxford were Royd Smith, of Frederick; Donald Pickering, of McDonogh; Lambert Davis, of Cecilton, and David Ifert, of Middletown.

Bradley Jones, assistant county agent of Frederick County who accompanied the team, described experiences at the contest and on a later tour of Holland, Germany and France.

The boys were praised for their work on behalf of the Maryland dairy industry by Philip C. Turner, president of the Maryland State Fair Board.

The Club Week program today will be devoted to "Older Youth Day." It is designed for youths who are working on their farms and can attend only one day's session of the affair.

Three clubbers were named yesterday to represent Maryland at the American Youth Leadership Training Camp in Michigan next week.

They are Ralph Shank, 20, of Hagerstown; Harland Beachey, 18, of Swanton and James W. Hudson, jr., 19, of West Friendship.

They were selected, according to Mylo S. Downey, State Boy's 4-H Club leader, for their outstanding records of 4-H Club leadership and achievement.

Negro 4-H Delegates Hear Ala. Educator

Petersburg, Va., Aug. 9 (AP).—Material progress will not result in a better world unless it is coupled with respect for the rights of all peoples, J. F. Drake, president of A. & M. College of Normal, Ala., said today. He spoke at the third regional Negro 4-H Camp.

Speaking to about 200 club members and leaders from 17 southern states, Drake said:

"We see daily examples of the results of scientific progress turned into implements of death and destruction—examples of scientific achievement being used as an instrument to strengthen the hand of the strong against the weak. The scientists themselves who make this material progress possible are saying that there can be no better world unless there is genuine progress in tolerance and human understanding—unless individuals and nations are willing to work with other people for the common good of all."

Policeman Seeks Trial Board Delay

District Court was petitioned yesterday to enjoin the Police Department from holding Trial Board proceedings against Pvt. Warren G. Farran, who was convicted in the court of stealing air conditioners from a construction job.

The Trial Board hearing is to be held on Friday, but Farran contends that it should be delayed until the court conviction is finally decided on appeal. Farran has not yet been sentenced.

Through his attorney, T. Emmett McKenzie, Farran contends that the Trial Board "approaches perilously close to contempt" by trying administratively the same case which the court is settling, according to the petition.

The court petition says: "Firstly, the charging tribunal (Trial Board) determines the guilt of the defendant; secondly, the defendant is given a 'trial;' lastly, off comes defendant's head, and the 'trial' amounts only to a not too subtle form of additional persecution."

Slayer of 3 Is Killed by Deputy Sheriff

Fremont, Mo., Aug. 9 (U.P.).—William Harris, 39-year-old ex-convict wanted for three murders, was shot and killed today on a timber trail in the Clark National Forest.

A deputy sheriff, one of scores of officers on watch in the heavily wooded rough Ozarks country, reported that he saw Harris and told him to "stick 'em up." He said Harris turned to run.

"I let him have it," the deputy said.

Harris has been sought since Monday night, when he shot and killed R. N. Fansler, 65; his son, Homer Fansler, 27, and his own 4-year-old daughter, Barbara Wanda Harris. He wounded two other members of the Fansler family and fled.

The elder Fansler accused Harris of knowledge of the disappearance of his 15-year-old daughter, Lola. Both Harris and the girl disappeared from their homes near Eminence, Mo., last Friday. Harris returned Monday night. The girl has not yet been found.

Speeding Arrest Leads to Charge Of Bank Robbery

Baltimore, Aug. 9 (AP).—Joseph W. Nolen, 25-year-old Kentuckian picked up for driving 75 miles an hour on a Maryland highway, was charged today with a $35,000 Cincinnati bank robbery.

He was ordered held in $100,000 bail by United States Commissioner Ernest Volkart pending removal to Ohio on the charge.

The Baltimore FBI office reported Nolen was arrested last night by Maryland State Police near Baltimore. A search of the car turned up two revolvers.

A routine check brought a reply from the FBI that he was one of three brothers wanted in connection with the July 26 holdup of a branch bank in Cincinnati.

Scripture for Korea

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—A special edition of 50,000 copies of Korean scriptures has been printed for South Korean armed forces, the American Bible Society said today.

Howley Visits Berlin, Gets Hero's Welcome

Berlin, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—Frank L. Howley of Philadelphia, former United States commandant in Berlin who played a prominent part in the cold war against the Russians, returned here today as a "tourist" and received a hero's welcome.

Dressed in civilian clothes instead of the brigadier general's uniform he wore while here before, Howley said he was "encouraged somewhat" by the current world situation.

Old Masters Destroyed In Dominican Fire

Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—A collection of paintings by Goya, El Greco, Van Dyck, Murillo and other old masters was reported today to have been destroyed in a fire at the customs house here yesterday.

Estimated to be worth more than $100,000, the collection was said to have included El Greco's "St. Bartholomew," Goya's "Portrait of Countess Maria Josefa Frutas," Van Dyck's "Sacrifice of Abraham," Quentin Metsy's "Madonna and Child," Murillo's "Dream of Bartolome" and others.

Tuesday Last Registration Day For Prince Georges Primaries

Prospective voters in Prince Georges County September 18 primary elections who have not yet registered may do so next Tuesday when all 47 polling places will be open for that purpose.

Registration officials will be on duty at the polling places from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., the Board of Election Supervisors announced yesterday.

Although persons may register at the board's Marlboro office on weekdays until that time, Tuesday will be the last day to register to vote in the primaries.

Two more county-wide registration days are scheduled before the November 7 general elections. They are October 3 and 10.

County registration books now list the total of 47,067 voters. Democratic registrations lead Republican by about 2 to 1.

In Montgomery County, registration books for the primaries will close Friday, officials there announced.

Registration may be made only at the Board of Supervisors office in Rockville. To accommodate late registrants, the office will remain open until midnight Friday.

Radio in Review

Just May Be That Video's Here to Stay

—By John Crosby—

THE Northwestern University Reviewing Stand's discussion on the topic, "The Impact of Television," was canceled. There seems to be some disagreement as to the cause of cancellation. The Mutual Broadcasting System, which has no television network, says it was because radio was not represented on the panel. John Meck Industries, whose president, John Meck, was to have been one of the panel members, claims that Mutual refused to allow the horrid word, television, to be bandied around on its network.

Crosby

I don't know who is right. But the incident takes me back a score or so of years when the newspapers, alarmed at the growth of a competitor, decided to ignore radio. It was felt that if no one mentioned the nasty thing, it would just go away. But it didn't. The absence of mention of television on radio will not, I feel, either do radio any good or televlvision any harm. The darn thing is here to stay, fellas. You'll just have to make the best of it.

SPEAKING of the past, I see that Ford Frick, the president of the National League, is blaming radio for the decline in minor league attendance. Not television, mind you. Frick absolves television, claiming there isn't enough of it in range of minor league cities to make much difference.

But just why Frick has pinned the blame on radio is not very clear. It's an argument I haven't heard in years. Originally the baseball men were highly suspicious of radio. But through the decades, the feeling gradually grew both among broadcasters and baseball magnates that radio had added a vast new audience, especially among women, to the national pastime both in major and minor league cities.

Now, at this late date, Frick decides that radio is a villain after all. Why? There was just as much radio last year and the minors had their best season in history. I have no idea why minor league attendance is down this year, but it seems to me that bad weather, high prices and the grim news from Korea may all share some of the responsibility for keeping people away from the ball parks. Radio, after all, has been around the ball parks for a quarter of a century. Any damage it would do the minor leagues should have been felt years ago.

RATHER belatedly, simply because we're on the subject of baseball, I'd like to say a few kind words about the telecast of the All-Star game, which, you'll recall, came from Chicago. Last fall, when the World Series was carried on several TV networks, there were loud squawks from Chicago and St. Louis. The Chicagoans and the St. Louisans both proclaimed that the New York technique of telecasting baseball games was far behind their own.

Since we Easterners had no way of checking up on these claims, they were set down as simple provincial pride and ignored. However, the All-Star game gave us all a chance to see how they do it in Chicago. We took a while to get used to it, but I'm forced to concede that the Chicagoans do it better.

Several of their cameras are planted somewhere along the first and the third base lines. This gives you a view of the batter from the side rather than from on top as do our telecasts, and you get a far better idea of what short of stuff the pitcher is throwing. For the first time I could call balls and strikes with a reasonable degree of accuracy. Also, on a swing and a miss, you could tell what sort of pitch the batter swung at, how far he missed and why he missed.

The Chicago technique also follows the ball a lot more closely after it is hit, sometimes sacrificing the base-running in the process. On the whole, though, I prefer the Chicago technique to our own. I wish we'd at least give it a try.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

We are still smarting under the indignity of being refused service at a non-air-conditioned Arlington tea house a few days ago. Why? Because my husband wore neither necktie nor coat in deference to the oppressive heat.

Must man continue to be enslaved in necktie and coat as a mark of respectability?

Mrs. H. G.
Arlington, Va.

Dear Mrs. G.:

It's too hot to be angry. Console yourself with the thought that many of us have been through this same experience.

A few years ago a war hero came to Washington to get a Congressional Medal of Honor from President Truman. During the ceremony at the White House, the veteran and his father were in shirt sleeves, and nobody objected.

But a few minutes later, at a hotel dining room two blocks away, they were refused service because they weren't wearing coats.

As far as I'm concerned, that reduced the whole thing to absurdity. But I don't think it changed local custom one whit.

Women don't mind being conspicuous; in fact, many women rather enjoy having all eyes on them when they enter a room.

But most men have a horror of being conspicuous, and go to great lengths to dress and behave like other men, so that they will be conservatively "respectable." Restaurants which insist on certain standards of dress do not establish such community customs, but merely cater to them. And they have a perfect right to.

On the other hand, the individual retains the right to dress as he pleases, and go elsewhere. Our Federal Diary man, Jerry Klutz, has long waged a fight for more comfortable summer dress for men, and I wish more members of my sex had the courage and good sense to follow his lead.

Personally, I can't take Washington summers bound up in coat and tie, so I work in a sport shirt and eat in places that don't object. In the evening, when I'm escorting my favorite wife, I've got to wear the full male uniform—but it's understood that she won't ask me to take her any place that isn't air-conditioned.

Restaurants don't relish the idea of turning away trade, but they'd rather lose the patronage of the shirt-sleeved fellow at the door than risk offending all the horsed-up diners who are slaves to custom.

Rather than blame the restaurants, we men should blame ourselves. If enough of us would revolt we'd have the power to put this tyranny into reverse, and bar the Caspar Milquetoasts who wear neckties and coats.

Bill

COLD WAR

A State Department blonde got tired of shivering in her 65-degree air-cooled office, and took direct action. She brought a heater to work with her, and landed the story on page one.

And I'll bet a cookie her protest gets faster action than some the State Department has been sending out lately.

Thieves Finally Crack Safe On 4th Try

But the safe they did open yielded $397 in currency. Police said the gang, apparently youths, overlooked about $400 in change in the safe.

Police believe they first broke into the Avignone Freres, a French restaurant at 1777 Columbia rd. nw. They tried to open a safe and the cash register in the restaurant but couldn't.

Next, police said, they apparently went to the roof, climbed to 1773 Columbia rd., broke a skylight and entered the Ambassador radio store. Again they went to work on the safe but it was too much for them. Thoroughly frustrated by now, they wrecked some of the merchandise.

Again they went to the roof, police believe, moved to the roof of the building at 1771 Columbia rd., entered through the skylight and got into the Fun Palace. They tried to jimmy open the cash register there but failed. More vandalism.

Then they broke into the offices of the Silent Sales System, in the rear of the 1771 address. They found a crowbar there and used it to pry open a green metal safe from which they took $397.

Dog Populace Drops; Meat Prices Blamed

The high cost of living has hit the canine world of Washington and the result has been a drop in the population, a Health Department official declared yesterday.

W. W. Burdette, who directed the recently completed anti-rabies campaign, said many persons who previously brought several dogs to the inoculation centers this year brought only one. When asked about this, they said they had gotten rid of their other pets because of the high cost of food. Annual inoculations are required by law before licenses can be issued or renewed.

Burdette said only 17,711 dogs were inoculated this year, compared with 22,205 last year.

He estimated the cost of feeding a dog properly at about 50 cents a day at present prices. Soaring meat prices have therefore decreased the dog population here, he said.

Truman Refused to Appease Reds

By Tom McNamara and Jack Anderson

(Editor's note—While Drew Pearson is on a brief vacation, his column will be written by members of his staff.)

One of the untold stories of the Korean war is that Joe Stalin had a blunt forewarning from President Truman that we wouldn't put up with any more Soviet shenanigans — in Korea or anywhere else.

Trygve Lie

The ultimatum was relayed by Trygve Lie, U. N. secretary-general, when he visited Moscow just before the Korean outbreak. Lie wanted to work out a "peace" formula whereby we would recognize Communist China as a member of the United Nations if Stalin, in turn, agreed to call off the cold war.

However, Truman flatly rejected this proposal when the U. N. official sounded him out before leaving for Moscow. The President said he was willing to meet Stalin halfway on "honorable" grounds, but not as an appeaser.

Somewhat crestfallen, Lie asked as the conference broke up: "Mr. President, is there any message you would like me to give to Generalissimo Stalin?"

"No," replied Truman.

Then he added, crisply: "Yes, tell the generalissimo that the only thing we want from him is peace. Also, tell him that the United States will take no more pushing around anywhere he tries it."

That was one month before the Korean invasion.

Controls Coordinator

Top coordinator of the economic controls program will not be Stuart Symington, chief of the National Securities Resources Board, as generally believed, but John R. Steelman, assistant to the President.

Symington, a man of action who doesn't hesitate to tread on toes to get a job done, stepped too many times on the large brogans of Defense Secretary Louis Johnson. As a result, Johnson vigorously protested to the White House when he heard that Symington was being considered for the coordinator post.

Another Cabinet member who dislikes the NSRB chief and who helped put the Indian sign on him is Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer.

"If I am to do a responsible job administering my part of the controls program, I must have authority," Sawyer notified the White House. "That's impossible with Symington breathing down my neck."

So, rather than cause a ruckus, Truman will assign Steelman to do the coordinating, with Symington functioning as No. 1 adviser and trouble-shooter. Other assistant coordinators will be Budget Director Fred Lawton and Leon Keyserling, chairman of the President's Economic Council.

President's Habits

Though President Truman doesn't object to smoking, he won't touch tobacco in any form . . . He insists on being on time for all appointments and warns his tardy assistants that "it's an insult to be late." . . . Truman has gone overboard for television, has three sets in Blair House, one in his office and even one on board his yacht . . . The President takes a swim in the White House pool every morning before breakfast . . . He doesn't like air conditioning. In fact, his office is the only space in the White House that isn't artificially cooled . . . Despite the terrible pressures of his job, the President maintains a uniformly calm and friendly manner throughout each hectic day. Only outward sign of tension is an occasional unconscious wringing of the presidential hands.

Tank Production

Despite what the brass hats are telling Congress, it will be another year before American production lines start rolling out tanks that can duel with Russia's 60-ton metal monsters.

These new super-tanks will come in three sizes. Only the smallest, however, is ready for production and will soon start rolling off the Cadillac assembly line. Of course, this junior model is no match for the Soviet 60-tonners, and its big brothers won't be ready for production until next year.

Meanwhile, the Army has five grades of tanks. The smallest are classified simply as "X". First to arrive in Korea, these baby tanks crumbled like eggshells beneath the advancing Red army's tanks.

The next lowest grades, Sherman I and Sherman II tanks, are now arriving in Korea, and the Marines are spearheaded by still a larger tank, the Pershing. Yet our biggest and best tank, the Patton, still hasn't reached the battlefront.

Meanwhile, the Army is hastily converting Pershing into Patton tanks as a stop-gap measure, but even the Patton is a tin can alongside Russia's mighty Stalin tank.

No Baseball Ban

President Truman has assured Baseball Commissioner "Happy" Chandler that the Government plans no ban or controls on the national sport. Chandler called on the President recently to discuss baseball's war role.

"I didn't come over here to ask any favors, but to offer the services of our national sport, including myself, to the war effort," Chandler declared. "If there is any way we can help out, let us know."

Truman replied that he would put the former Kentucky Senator, a reservist, "on top of my list, if we need you," but added:

"Happy, you're doing a great job for the country right where you are and I would like to see you stay there. The same goes for the sport you represent. It would be most unwise at this time to curtail it in any way and I have no intentions of doing so."

Chandler reported that no major league ballplayers were seeking deferments, other than for justifiable reasons applying to all men of draft age.
